Beach Parents Must Cope With Children's ADD

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Does your child have a short attention span, display hyperactive and impulsive behavior and have difficulty following instructions?

Many Virginia Beach parents may think their child is just going through a phase, when actually they may be suffering from Attention Deficit Disorders.

"It's been around for years. A lot of people don't know about it," said Dr. Charles Parker, a Virginia Beach child psychiatrist.

According to Parker, the most obvious form of ADD is hyperactivity. These children jump out of their seats, interrupt constantly and don't listen.

"They can't pay attention. Their mind is going all over the place," Parker said.

Most children are referred for ADD testing in or around the second grade.

Another form of ADD is non-hyperactivity, where the child sits but can't focus on what's going on, therefore he has a mental representation of hyperactivity.

Most children are referred for ADD testing in or around the second grade. These children haven't settled down yet and the parents realize there is more to his behavior problem than just childishness.

Parker said there is a whole host of reasons why children contract ADD from birth, with fetal alcohol syndrome being one of them. Many parents of ADD children suffered from the same disease when they were a child.

The disorder may be treated by any psychostimulant. Dexamine and Ritalin, in pill form, are the most frequently prescribed medications. Parker said, depending on the child and the nature of the problem, most patients usually take the medication twice a day. Although it may decrease the child's appetite and cause sleep disturbances, the child starts to calm down almost immediately after taking the medicine.

Parker said it is very important that parents learn how to handle a child with an attention disorder. Medication, structure, communication, patience and understanding that the child has a handicap are just a few ways for parents to deal with the situation.

The Eastern Virginia Psychiatric Associates where Parker works is holding a free seminar for parents, exploring the disorder and how it affects a child's life, on Friday, Nov. 17 from 7 to 8 p.m. at 168 Business Park Drive.

Therapist Janet N. Schiff will present the seminar, which is open to the public.

"It's a very subtle disease. It's a serious problem," Parker said.

Pro Secretaries Announce Workshop

The Tidewater Chapter of Professional Secretaries International (PSI) will present a workshop on "Beyond the Basics and Perception + Challenge = Commitment," on Wednesday, Nov. 15 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Radisson Hotel.

The speaker for this workshop will be Sylvia L. Cash, CPS, former PSI International president.

The cost of the workshop is $69 for PSI members and $79 for non-members. Students pay $39. Included in the cost will be continental breakfast, all breaks, lunch, a copy of the reference book. Cash will use in one of the sessions, and a CEU certificate.

The workshop will review and relearn grammar rules and discuss the challenges of the 1990s and the commitment necessary to enhance professions.

For more information call Deborah Deets at 494-2983 or Margaret Floyd at 494-2512. The deadline for signing up for this workshop is Nov. 10.

J.R. Reid Makes Pro Regular Season Debut Fri. Against Bullets

VBS Staff Report

J.R. Reid, a 6-foot-9, 256-pound power forward for the Charlotte Hornets, will make his regular season professional debut this Friday night, Nov. 3, at the Charlotte Coliseum against the Washington Bullets.

J.R., a Kempville High School graduate and Virginia Beach's most famous basketball player, this year was first round National Basketball Association draft pick, following three years at the University of North Car-

It is reported that Reid signed a four-year $5 million contract with the Hornets.

J.R.'s father, Herman Reid, a physical education instructor at Princess Anne Junior High School, told The Virginia Beach Sun recently that he is glad his son's professional career has finally begun. But hopefully, he said, the intense media scrutiny J.R. and his family has received over the last four or five years will subside.

City Council To Consider Concept Of Downtown

By Leo Cahill
City Council Reporter

The Central Business District, an idea that originated years ago when developers of the Pembroke area first visualized a "downtown" for Virginia Beach, may be coming closer to a reality.

Comments on a guideline for a master plan prepared by consultants hired by the Central Business District (CBD) Association were generally enthusiastic when the CBD presented the pilot study to City Council Monday afternoon.

Next Monday Council will consider an endorsement of the concept plan as a basis for the future development of the Central Business District. Along with the endorsement would be an appropriation of $150,000 to finance the next phase, the development of a master plan by the consulting firm of EDWA, Inc., which prepared the concept plan.

Said Councilman William D. Sessions: The CBD has been putting in its time and money and now it was up to Council to endorse the plan and continue the project. The amount of money requested is small, he said, and "I strongly believe we will finish it." He said the plan was "very exciting."

"The idea has to grow on you," said Councilman John D. Moss, "and it has." He said that he had a strong opinion this is a good venture. He emphasized the necessity that subsequent zoning preserve the existing neighborhoods and pointed out that the plan would work with or without a light rail system.

The financing of the infrastructure, he said, would have to be disproportionately borne by commercial development.

He directed the appropriation request by the CBD to City Manager Aubrey V. Watts Jr., for a recommendation. "The time is right," he said, and "non-residential development is something we need." He said that he was very excited and that the concept was a great idea.

Councilwoman Reba McClanan expressed some reservations about the plan. She said that she did not believe downtown development is a way of the future and that she did not see how the development of one part of the city will benefit the rest of the city. "I can see us having districts all over the city," she said, but added that she did not want to be adverse.

She said that it was hard to compare what is happening in other cities with Virginia Beach because not many cities have developed the way the Virginia Beach has. She said that she appreciated all the work done by the CBD.

Gerald S. Divaris, chairman of the CBD Association, said that the next phase will become very specific, will have the actual zoning required, modifications and transportation system. He said that public hearings will be scheduled and that everyone involved will have input in the plan.

The appropriation will require two readings. With the first scheduled for Nov. 6, Council will be permitted to make modifications before the second reading on Nov. 13, Moss said.

Also included in the resolution will be the appointment of a "blue ribbon committee" comprised of members of the CBD, the Chamber of Commerce and appointees of the City Council to prepare a financing plan to implement requirements of the master plan. Moss said he wanted this committee to be a specific purpose committee.

Mayor Meyera Oberndorf said that the only complaints she has received are from the residents of Pocomantas Village who are concerned that the residential neighborhood would be disturbed.

CBD and consultants, both, however, have emphasized the necessity of having residential development as part of the plan.

139,708 Voters Are Registered

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Approximately 139,708 registered voters are expected to turn out for the Nov. 7 election, according to the City of Virginia Beach Voter Registrar's office.

Democrats J.W. "Billy" O'Brien, Jr., 83rd district; Glenn B. McClanan, 84th district; Glenn R. Croshaw, 81st district and Republicans Harry R. "Bob" Purkey, 82nd district and Bob Tata, 85th district, are vying unopposed for the House of Delegates.

Campaigning for the Commonwealth's attorney position are Republican Robert J. "Bob" Humphreys and Democrat Andre J. Evans. Humphreys, who served as chief commonwealth's attorney for five years, said he is confident he'll win the election.

"I've spent more time defending myself from personal attacks from my opponent," he said.

Evans, who served as commonwealth's attorney from 1967 to 1981, could not be reached for comment.

Sheriff's candidate J.R. "Jack"

Dewan, Republican, said he wants to return the credibility and reputation back to the Sheriff's Department. He also said his opponents have no experience. Opponents Francis H. "Frank" Drew, Democrat, and Thomas A. Collins, were not available for comment.

"I think that my progress has been steady and we've maintained a positive campaign," Dewan said. "I've won the primary election based on my experience and knowledge of the job and my reputation around the state as far as honesty and integrity goes."

Commissioner of Revenue, Robert P. "Bobby" Vaughan and Treasurer John T. Atkinson are both running unopposed for reelection to their positions.

In the state election, voters will choose either Republican Marshall Coleman or Democrat Douglas Wilder for governor.

Democrat Edwina "Eddy" Dalton and Republican Donald Beyer are running for lieutenant governor and Mary Sue Terry, Democrat, and Joe Benedetti, Republican, for the attorney general.

Marshall's Future Causing Squabble

By Leo Cahill
City Council Reporter

The nostalgic last-days-at-the-Marshall's-Hotel-saga has quickly turned into a neighborhood squabble with North End Virginia Beach residents taking a dim view of the owner's plans.

Whatever is put up at the Oceanfront site at 66th Street, it won't be a cabanas. City Council Monday denied by a vote of 9-1 an application of the hotel for a conditional use permit for cabanas on five of the 13-lot parcel at the Oceanfront and 66th Street. Councilman John L. Perry voted against denial and Councilman William D. Sessions Jr. abstained.

John Rogers, representing the Marshall's and a part owner, had requested a withdrawal. He said that he is in the process of selling two of the lots but that if these deals fall through he should have the opportunity to bring back the application for the cabanas.

Some North End residents don't want the cabanas. They said they could be time-shared and would attract people, noise, traffic and even transients. They said they would not be compatible with the residential neighborhood.

Rogers said he already has a demolition permit from the city and that hotel would soon come down. He said that cabanas would not be precedent-setting at the beach. They already exist at the Naval Officers Beach Club and at the Ramada Inn.

Citizens May Comment On School Board Seats

By Leo Cahill
City Council Reporter

Citizens will have an opportunity on Wednesday, Nov. 15 to support candidates for the three School Boards seats where current terms expire on Dec. 31.

Anticipating a minimum of 35 speakers, Council Monday decided to limit talks at the public hearing to three minutes each between 4 and 8 p.m. The public hearing is required by State law and as a public hearing will be open to all speakers, including candidates themselves.

However, Council is encouraging candidates to reserve their talks for another session on Nov. 30 from 4 to 8 p.m. when they will be given 10 minutes each.

All of the incumbents are eligible for reappointment. They include Gerald G. Gibbs Jr., Virginia Beach Borough; Robert W. Hall, Princess Anne Borough; and M. Boyd Jones, Bayside Borough.

Speakers who want to avoid long waits are being asked to sign up with the City Clerk's office a day ahead of time where they will be given appointments. Those who do not sign up will have to wait until the other speakers have finished.

Council's experience has been that the sessions last most of the day. Councilwoman Reba Mc-

Clanan said that the format for last year's hearing was not good. She said she did not object to the time allowed if all Council members attended the session. She said that the city has had some excellent speakers, but suggested that speakers should be made aware that new appointments may be limited by the eligibility of the incumbents.

Councilman John D. Moss said that 35 or 40 speakers is a modest estimate for this year.

Under the law, while the public hearing is required, candidates do not have to be present to be considered for school board seats.

Special appointments are a good idea, said Councilwoman Nancy Parker, because it is unfair for speakers to have to wait as much as three hours to talk.

Aubrey V. Watts Is "Distinguished"

City Manager Aubrey V. Watts Jr., has been awarded the Distinguished Service Award from the American Water Works Association for his contributions, outstanding participation and counsel toward the progress of the Virginia Section of the Association during the past ten years.

Pavilion Center Breaks Ground

Pavilion Center, a $10 million, eight-story office building to be located adjacent to the Pavilion and the city's arts center, recently broke ground.

To be developed by the Runnymede Corporation, the building will have 98,000 square feet of space, almost half of which will be occupied by Virginia Beach Federal Savings Bank, and will serve as the bank's headquarters. It is expected to be open by January, 1991.

For Governor

With only days remaining before Election Day, the race for governor between Marshall Coleman and Douglas Wilder moves into a final battle for ballots.

The 1989 campaign is destined to set two records: a new high for spending, a new low for negative advertising. If you believe television commercials, Coleman is a shifty opportunist and Wilder is the worst threat to the Virginia way of life since Ulysses S. Grant.

Blow away the smoke and the basic issue, as in all political campaigns, is which candidate can do the better job. Of the two candidates, who is more likely to continue the Old Dominion's advance in economic development, education, transportation and the problems that confront all Virginians? It is Doug Wilder who is better prepared.

The 58-year-old veteran of 20 years in the General Assembly is committed to all areas of Virginia. Wilder puts it plainly: "We need to stop pitting region against region, locality against locality. We should do what is best for all of Virginia."

On the other hand, Coleman has an unprecedented relationship with one region, one industry, one man. Almost half of Coleman's campaign funds have been provided by builders and developers, most of them in Northern Virginia. His benefactor is Northern Virginia developer Dwight Schar who has set a new Virginia record by contributing and lending nearly $1 million in personal and business money to Coleman's campaign. Coleman insists he will not be influenced by all the money. It is reasonable to suggest that he can tie that bull outside.

Rural Virginia, often neglected in Richmond, will get a fair shake from Wilder. He has proposed an impressive 14-point blueprint for rural development over the next four years. Wilder says, "It is my sincere hope that these efforts on behalf of rural Virginia will be remembered as one of the hallmarks of my administration."

While Coleman says Northern Virginia transportation will get special attention if he is elected governor, Wilder says, "My concern will be for transportation all over the state."

On education, Wilder says that getting back to basics when it comes to teaching Virginia's youth involves much more classroom learning. He says more has been asked of teachers in recent years, and it is time to do the same for their students and parents. "It is not enough to sign a report card every six weeks. We must get back to self-discipline, hard work, responsibility and perseverance."

The major question about Wilder, according to Coleman backers, is the more than 4,000 appointments the governor makes to boards and agencies that determine the direction of state government. The Coleman people suggest that Wilder would appoint radical liberals who would turn the Old Dominion far left. This is pure bunk. Wilder has the experience and political moxie to make the right choices. In fact, with the eyes of the state and nation on his every move, Wilder might very well give the state the fairest and best appointments made by any governor in Virginia's history.

Everywhere he has been during this mean and tough campaign, Wilder has focused on job creation, responsible education, maintaining low taxes and continued progress for all regions of the Commonwealth. Doug Wilder says he will not govern for or through special interests, he will govern for all the people of Virginia. We believe him. — H.B.

Get Out And Vote

Election day is less than a week away. After months and months of listening to campaign speeches and seeing candidates' faces along every street, it's finally time to make a decision and head to your nearest voting location.

Choosing the right candidate may be hard for some people, especially with so many "experienced, qualified and worthy candidates" in the running. Hopefully all residents of Virginia Beach have taken the time to listen to each and every candidate and what they have to say. Their subjects are important and may have an effect on the future of this city.

As with just about every election, there's going to be some negative campaigning. Although it's not fair, it's going to be done. Voters should look beyond what others are saying and choose the candidate they feel best suits the position. Muddling and bad-talking may dissuade voters from making the right choice and it shouldn't.

It's very important that everyone of voting age vote on Nov. 7. The community is given the chance to choose its elected officials, so it should take advantage of that right. Don't be lazy or indecisive, get involved!

For further information concerning the election or where to vote, call your voter registrar at 427-8683. — K.L.D.

YWCA Holds Teen Dinner

In honor of National Teen Week, the YWCA of South Hampton Roads is holding its seventh annual Teen Recognition Dinner on Thursday, Oct. 26 at 7:30 p.m. at Grand Affairs.

Twenty-eight young women have been nominated from area high schools for these two scholarship awards. A panel of community leaders interviewed each nominee and they are evaluating the young women's responses to the interview questions, her scholastic achievement, extracurricular involvement, leadership ability, personality and interest and concern for her peers as well as issues facing women.

The awards will be presented Thursday night, along with guest speaker Kathy Bowen-Woodward, Ph.D., of First Hospital Corporation. Dr. Bowen-Woodward is author of Coping with a Negative Body Image, and will speak on, "To Be A Young Woman in America Today."

Call the YWCA office at 625-4248 for more information.

Computer Group Holds Fair

The Tidewater Macintosh User's Group and the Virginia Beach Central Library will co-sponsor a Macintosh Computer Fair on Saturday, Nov. 4 from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. in the library's auditorium complex. The fair will showcase for the public the Apple Macintosh computer.

User group members will demonstrate the Macintosh's capabilities and sponsor a beginner's corner and a kid's corner. Local retail businesses will provide information about Macintosh products.

Representatives from Apple Computer Company's Federal Systems Group will also participate and demonstrate the newly released Macintosh computers. There will be a series of demonstrations and lectures throughout the day in the library auditorium.

The fair is free and open to the public. The Central Library is located at 4100 Virginia Beach Boulevard in Virginia Beach.

Thanksgiving Dance For Special People

A Thanksgiving Dance for physically and mentally handicapped people will be held Saturday, Nov. 18, from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Bow Creek Recreation Center, 3427 Clubhouse Road. The dance will be sponsored by the Fraternal Order of VDT/SEAL, the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation and CLASP (Citizens Loving All Special People).

Participation is free. Refreshments will be served and door prizes will be given. The latest hits will be played. Parents and guardians are welcome, however, chaperones are present at all times.

Transportation is available through TRT at $5 per roundtrip per individual. Call Carolyn Wisner at 545-8041 after 7 p.m. weekdays or anytime weekends.

For further information call Harry Baird at 486-3110.

Vietnam Vet Bloodmobile Set

The Virginia Beach Resort Hotel and Conference Center, in conjunction with the Red Cross, will host a "China Beach" Vietnam Veterans' bloodmobile on Monday, Nov. 6, from 4 to 8 p.m., in the hotel's Chesapeake Room.

In addition to the bloodmobile, the staff will be dressed in uniforms of the period, and many of the veterans' groups will have memorabilia on display.

The public is invited. The Virginia Beach Resort Hotel and Conference Center is located at 2800 Shore Drive in Virginia Beach, on the corner of Shore Drive and Great Neck Road.

"China Beach" Vietnam Veterans Program Set

Ocean Occasions will present a Veterans Day dance at the Sheraton Beach Inn, 36th Street and Oceanfront, on Saturday, Nov. 11 from 8 p.m. to midnight.

Snacks will be provided and a cash bar will be available. Tickets are free but must be reserved due to limited seating. Music will be provided by Cheers.

For tickets and more information call Ocean Occasions at 422-0035 or the Hampton Roads Council of Veterans Organizations at 587-8346.

Parents Without Partners Meet

Parents Without Partners, Virginia Beach Chapter 216, is inviting single parents to a membership orientation on Tuesday, Nov. 7 from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Thalia Methodist Church. Call 497-8112 or 471-6672 for more information.

Helping Families Learn About Good Nutrition

The Mayor's Report

Virginia Beach Mayor
The Honorable
Meyera Oberndorf

Virginia Beach is a fast growing city. It also has a great increase in poverty. Low-income families are at greater risk of malnutrition because they have less to spend on food. Thus, each food purchase is critical. To help our Virginia Beach low income families, Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture has requested and received funding to establish the federal program EFNEP (Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program).

The EFNEP program began in March with the basic mission of teaching the low income families about eating right on a tight budget. No food or cash assistance is involved. Technicians Gwen Harp and Iris Miller find homemakers who need nutrition education through referrals from other agencies, through neighborhood contacts and by simply knocking on doors. They teach a series of nutrition lessons one-on-one and in small groups. They also work with youth through the 4-H program.

Currently, 80 families are enrolled in learning how to plan, purchase, prepare and preserve food for nutritious meals. After six months of training, families graduate out of the program with

Educators Making Parents Feel More Involved

The VBEA Report

By Clair Polley,
President of the Virginia
Beach Education Association

This week's Virginia Beach Sun article was written by Cheryl Tokac, VBEA vice president.

Last month, the National Coalition for Parent Involvement in Education sponsored an institute concerning parent involvement in education. Many of the presenters discussed parents and students at risk. In attempting to define "parents at risk," we found that almost any family at any time could be defined as being at risk.

Our job then as educators and parents who support public school, is to make all parents feel involved. The research studies consistently send us the "common sense" message about the importance of parent involvement in education. We assume that children from advantaged families will do well no matter the level of parent involvement, but we must understand that all children will do better when parent involvement is increased. For children at risk, the positive effects of parent involvement are more pronounced.

The fact is clear that with increased parent involvement, children do better in school and in effect go to better schools. Without a doubt, the whole school gets better. Parents are the catalyst for effecting the change. Research has shown that increased involvement leads to higher grades and greater long-term academic achievement. The children's attitudes and behavior improves. People in schools become more excited and initiate more innovative, more exciting, and more successful programs. This in turn leads to more effective schools.

The school becomes more effective because it then becomes an extension of the community. The school becomes a friendlier and healthier environment. The communication between parent and school also becomes more positive. In times when crises situations arise, parents become more inclined to support the school and the school more inclined to support the parent and community. In my role where parent contact is essential, it is surprising to see that often when parents come to school for conferences to discuss the results of extensive testing, observation, and evaluations, parents and teachers are meeting for the first time. More than once I have heard a parent or teacher state the familiar cliché of finally being able to associate

Do You Know "Vote" Is A Four-Letter Word?

By Lillian Yowell,
Virginia Beach Constitution
Celebration Commission
Consultant

There are two kinds of four-letter words - good ones and bad ones, but some people don't seem to know the difference. When we hear the phrase "a four-letter word," we infer that it has reference to an obscene or vulgar word. We forget that love is a four-letter word.

We often hear the expression, no news is good news. Good is a good four-letter word, but the news reported by the media does seem to be predominantly bad news. Scanning some newspapers, it appears that the coverage is overly pessimistic, highlighting gloom and doom. Perhaps that is what irritates the public. Maybe we have become blasé and need to be jolted.

Last year, I saw an entertaining and informative one-woman show about the privilege of voting. "Vote is a Four-Letter Word" was designed for students in grades seven through twelve by the Law and Citizenship Education Unit of the St. Louis Public Schools. The dramatic presentation by a young black girl traced the evolution of full suffrage in the United States from colonial days to the 26th Amendment and the Civil Rights Movement.

In a post-show discussion, the storyteller and student volunteers presented suggestions for increasing voter participation on election day. This unusual presentation was written and directed by Sue Greenberg, the executive director of the St. Louis Volunteer Lawyers and Accountants for the Arts.

Last year, I saw an entertaining and informative one-woman show about the privilege of voting.

Our own Virginia Beach public schools initiated an excellent program last year to encourage voting. Every school in the system participated in "The Election Connection." From the youngest to the oldest, those young people will long remember the presidential campaign of 1988. Hopefully, they urged their parents to go to the polls and vote last November, and will do so again this year.

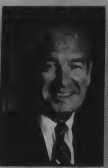

Instead of a big turnout for the coming election, many fear a big turnout will result in poor participation. Last year, many were upset by the negative campaigning in the presidential election, which usually draws the greatest turnout. This year is considered an off-year. But here in Virginia, we the People will be choosing our next governor, lieutenant governor, attorney general, representatives to the General Assembly as well as our commonwealth's attorney, sheriff and commissioner of the revenue.

shall's have been a problem to the residents, but that they have learned how to swallow bitter pills. He charged that in a letter written by Rodgers to the residents, Rodgers took a threatening tone - if you do not agree to the cabanas, something with a more severe impact will be put there. He suggested that Rodgers adopt a complete plan for the 13 lots.

Robert Stein, of 222 66th Street, said that seven or eight people park in his driveway on Sundays. He said that the cabanas would make it worse. He said that the two parking spaces per cabana will not be enough. He said he had no opposition to attached, single-family or multi-family units going on the site.

John Pugh, of 6612 Oceanfront, said that the hotel should be demolished as soon as possible to prevent vandalism. He has added that some people sleep in cabanas.

Rogers denied that his letter was threatening. He said he wanted to discuss the future of the area with the residents, and that he had a permit for every party given at the Marshall's. He said that the Ramada cabanas are not owned by only six families as claimed. That's only on the south side.

On the north side the cabanas are owned by 30 families. He said that each of the proposed cabanas would be owned by no more than two families. The proposed two-story cabana structure would have been divided into 22 units. Some of the neighbors, Rogers said, have agreed to purchase cabanas. In fact, he said, most of the people who want units are north end people.

Councilman Albert Balke thought that the proposal was precedent-setting and moved for denial.

Rogers added that one of the prospective buyers wants the lobby in the main building to be left for a use as a single-family residence. Another buyer is interested in leaving two other buildings on two lots for residential use, he said.

The Planning Commission also had recommended denial of the application because it was not in keeping with recommendation of the Comprehensive Plan.

Seateack Announces Program

Seateack Elementary School, 411 Birdneck Circle, has announced the following information:

The school's "Adopt-A-School" partner, the Dam Neck Guided Missile School, will hold "Ident-A-Kid" nights on Wednesday, Nov. 15 and Thursday, Nov. 16 from 6 to 8 p.m. in the cafeteria.

Seateack parents are invited to bring their children, preschool through junior high, to be fingerprinted and photographed. The prints and photos will be given to the parents for identification in case anything ever happens to their children.

Invitations for each night will be based on the parents' last initial: "A" through "L" on Nov. 15; and "M" through "Z" on Nov. 16. Parents are asked to accompany their children on the appropriate night.

Call Jan Makela, Adopt-A-School coordinator at 431-4085.

Each month Seateack students select "Citizens of the Month" from each class. To be selected for this honor, students must exhibit the "Three C's": Cooperation, Courtesy and Caring.

Selected students for October will be chosen on Thursday, Nov. 9 and will be honored at a tea on Thursday, Nov. 16 at 2:45 p.m. in the school cafeteria. Each student will receive a certificate and ribbon and will have their picture displayed on a bulletin board in the school's foyer and at a local fast food restaurant.

Call Sandra Overcash at 431-4085 for more information.

The school will hold seven effective parenting meetings in the library from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m.

The Nov. 15 session will cover study tips and homework; Dec. 13, how to build your child's self-esteem; Jan. 17, how to raise a physically fit child; Feb. 21, behavior management; March 21, how to get the most out of conferences; April 11, how to keep kids free from drugs; and May 16, preparing for summer-learning all during the year.

Call Shari Martz, guidance counselor, at 431-4085 for more information.

The school will present a Veterans' Day Assembly program on Thursday, Nov. 9 at 9:30 and 10:30 a.m.

Millie Harris, a local vocalist and businesswoman, will present a slide show with a patriotic theme and musical accompaniment. She and a group of her voice students will perform.

At the program's close, the U.S. Navy Color Guard from the Dam Neck Guided Missile School will present the stars and stripes, and the student body will join in singing the national anthem.

Call Jan Makela at 431-4085 for more information.

Pen Pals Meet After 20 Years

By Annette Hall
Special To The Sun

Tina Brewer, a Navy wife, knew just how to be recognized at the Norfolk airport by her pen pal arriving from Colwyn Bay, North Wales.

Navy wives, use to homecomings, can make themselves conspicuous among a sea of faces. The tactic also works well when meeting someone for the first time after corresponding for 20 years. Tina was accompanied by her two children Chad and Allison who carried flowers and welcome signs for Mary Scott.

"We hugged, kissed and cried at the airport," says Tina. Mary arrived recently for a 14-day "holiday."

The tears soon gave way to laughter when Mary sat in the driver's seat of the Brewer family automobile. "We're not trying to scare you," said Tina's husband Aviation Boatswain's Mate Launch and Recovery Equipment Chief (ABEC) Denver Brewer of the

Foley Speaks At Center For Arts

The Virginia Beach Center for the Arts will present a guest speaker on contemporary art, Suzanne Foley, curator at the Bayly Art Museum, University of Virginia in Charlottesville on Sunday, Nov. 19.

In an illustrated talk, "But Is It Art?" Foley introduces the audience to contemporary art by focusing on non-threatening language and often times, humor. A brunch reception begins at 11:45 a.m. at the Center. The lecture follows at 12:30 p.m. in the Price Auditorium. Both are free and open to the public.

This event is hosted by Art & Company, a support group of young professionals promoting the arts and other social activities at the Center.

Art of the 20th century, Foley admits, is often confusing and bewildering to the general public. Visitors to contemporary art museums can feel more comfortable by learning a basic framework for looking at and analyzing the art works. Also, by placing modernist works of art in their social, political, historical, and economic context, viewers can see how styles of art "fit" into a global society. Foley will refer to pieces that are on view in the international exhibit, An Electric Eye: Selections from the Frederick R. Weisman Art Foundation, opening Nov. 17 at the Center.

Prior to her current position at the Bayly Art Museum, Foley was director of the University Art Museum, University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee (1983 to 1986). From 1968 to 1981, she was curator at the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art, where she organized Space/Time/Sound, Conceptual Art in the San Francisco Bay Area in the 1970s, 1979, an exhibition (and accompanying text) surveying installation and performance art at that decade. Foley was associate curator at the Walker Art Center in Minneapolis (1962 to 1967), and began her career with positions at the Institute of Contemporary Art, Boston; and the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, Richmond.

Also an independent curator and consultant, she co-curated the exhibit Ceramic Sculpture: Six Artists, 1981, at the Whitney Museum of American Art, New York, and authored an accompanying essay.

Foley received her master's degree from Radcliffe College, Cambridge, Mass. Her writings are widely published and include works for the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art, Museum of Contemporary Art, Chicago; Art Papers and American Craft magazines.

Her professional affiliations and participation on national panels — most notably for the National Endowment for the Arts — are numerous and include: "Guest Curators in University Art Museums," Indiana University, 1985; and "Can We, Should We Sell Collections, and If So, Why and How?" American Association of Museums, Washington, D.C., 1989.

Ellis Hinnant-Will Exhibits At Beach Center For The Arts

Local artist Ellis Hinnant-Will will exhibit recent paintings in the Student Gallery at the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts Nov. 10 through Dec. 10.

The show is free and open to the public. An informal reception will be held Sunday, Nov. 12 from 2 to 4 p.m.

Hinnant-Will is a drawing and painting instructor at the Center for the Arts and recently exhibited at the Life-Saving Museum of Virginia. This summer, the Docent Council of the Chrysler Museum chose one of Hinnant-Will's works as a memorial for the late Mrs. Richard Seely.

The Virginia Beach Center for the Arts Student Gallery is open Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday, 1 to 5 p.m. The Center is located at 22nd Street and Park Avenue, opposite the Pavilion Convention Center, at the entrance to west-bound Route 44. Telephone the Center at 425-0000 for information.

Storytelling Fest At VWC

A storytelling festival, sponsored by Virginia Wesleyan College and the Norfolk Story League, is scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 4, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the college's Pruden Lounge.

The program is open to the public. Admission is $3 for adults and $1 for children under 12. Family rates are also available.

The featured guest storyteller for the festival is Gwendolyn Ledbetter from Asheville, N.C. She has been called a "Woman of Many Voices." Some of these voices came from listening to "storytalking" while growing up on Virginia's Eastern Shore. Beginning her storytelling in Asheville's Pack Library, she appeared for the first time in 1978 at the National Storytelling Festival in Jonesborough, Tennessee.

She has been chosen to conduct workshops at the National Institute there for the past two summers. Her audiotape of Celtic tales, "The Bone, the Harp, the Mouse, and the Bunclock," won a Notable Children's Recording accolade from the American Library Association. Gwendolyn has been defined as a "truly gifted and inspired storyteller who draws the listener into the story with the use of participation, dramatic use of voice and gesture."

A number of other storytellers are scheduled during the day-long program, including Chuck Fisher,

Gwendolyn Ledbetter

Shirley Sellers, Carolyn Pratts, Una Macgillivray, Susan Corbit, Betty Munden, Annette Holmes and Edie White. The program for the day will include storytelling sessions on mountain tales, native American Indian tales, folktales, humorous stories, and workshops on "How to Tell Stories," children's storytelling and adult storytelling.

Participants may bring a brown bag lunch and purchase soft drinks, or may eat lunch in the College dining hall for $4.30 for adults and $2 for children. Persons wishing to eat in the dining hall should indicate this when making reservations. For further information, call 455-3200.

VBAGT Meeting Date Changed

The Virginia Beach Association for the Gifted and Talented's general meeting, originally scheduled for Nov. 1, has been changed to Wednesday, Nov. 8 at 7 p.m. at the Old Donation Center for the Gifted and Talented.

Lynn Roth Taylor will speak on "Challenging the Gifted Child."

School Board Available For Comment

Virginia Beach City Public Schools officials will be available for comment concerning the School Board Referendum in the school board room of the School Administration Building after the polls close at 7 p.m. on election day, Nov. 7.

Preliminary voting results will be monitored in the board room.

"We've been having fun learning the differences in our language," said Tina. "Ta," is Mary's version of "thank you" and a "chip" is a close cousin to the french fry. "Chips from a bag are called 'crisps' by Mary and our pies are her pastries," explained Tina.

Tina and Mary began their pen pal relationship as sixth graders. Over the years their friendship grew as they traded pictures, exchanged Christmas presents and shared their innermost secrets. "We've gone through childhood, boyfriends, marriages, my kids and her dogs," said Tina. "It's nice, really nice to finally meet," she added.

Mary's husband, Trevor, an enlisted leading medical assistant in the British Royal Navy, has heard "I'm going to meet Tina," for the past 12 years. Savings from her job as a nurse in a home for the disabled and a tax rebate finally made Mary's dream come true.

"The American lifestyle is too fast," commented Mary on the hectic pace. "I'll be having a coke and a cigarette and Tina will say, 'let's go.' We tend to sit, have our cigarette and our drink - and then go," said Mary. Tina added, "They take their time, where around here, we throw it down and go."

Mary had some difficulty adjusting to the time change and money exchange. "You are five hours behind us and it doesn't sound like a lot, but when you look at your clock early evening you think, 'I'm in bed now,'" quipped Mary. She did well on the exchange rate of bills, but had trouble with the change.

Tina took vacation from her job as an instructor with the NAS Oceana Nautilus Center to show Mary the sights. Naval Air Station Oceana, the beach and malls were first on the agenda.

"You could lose yourself in your shopping malls," noted Mary. "You could go all day. In one of ours, you could be there possibly a half-hour. Everything is just so big - just as I expected it," said Mary. Commenting on Virginia Beach traffic, she said, "Traffic here is worse than London, I think."

Trips to Williamsburg, Yorktown and a long weekend in Washington, D.C., rounded out the sightseeing.

Mary Scott left for home on Oct. 17 with two expectations: that in the next few years Tina will visit her in Wales and that she will return for another visit.

And she promised, "When I get home, I'm going to write a nice letter to the tax man."

He asserts that politicians will stop using negative advertising only when it becomes ineffective. When We the People want to hear serious thoughts about serious subjects, our leaders will respond. As George Bernard Shaw once said of democracy, "the people get exactly what they deserve."

Our candidates for governor this year have sometimes played hardball, sometimes softball and even on occasion dirtyball. A Norfolk television station in one of its nightly "unscientific" polls a few weeks back asked listeners to respond to this question: Are you offended in any way by the current negative advertising of either Douglas Wilder or J. Marshall Coleman? Eighty-six percent said yes, 12 percent, no and 2 percent were undecided.

We People surely regard an appeal to public ignorance, prejudice or passion as morally wrong. Most Americans want to play by the rules, which set limits. It is a sad state of affairs when we have to decide which of the candidates ran the least offensive race as a factor in choosing a leader.

Galston concludes, "In politics (and perhaps elsewhere as well), the morality of using intrinsically attractive means is circumscribed by the ability of the political system — and in a democracy that means the people — to respond affirmatively to them."

As we mark our ballots this coming Tuesday, We the People should ponder our share of the blame for failing to bring out the best in our candidates. But we must resist the alternatives of leaving the ballot blank, as some have suggested, or of failing to vote at all.

Now, suppose this question appeared on your ballot: Is vote a good or bad four-letter word? How would you vote?

Again, news polls indicate that the public, and I include myself, is turned off by the negative campaigning in the gubernatorial race, just as we were in last year's presidential race. I must admit that I have blamed politicians and the media for focusing on personalities rather than on the real issues. Yet, I was given new insight into this problem when I read an article by William A. Galston, published in Report from the Institute for Philosophy & Public Policy, University of Maryland, Winter 1989.

He contends that politicians have an obligation to play hardball, which he defines as the use of questionable, quack-producing means. His argument is that a politician does not stand alone by acts on behalf of others, and thus has a responsibility to act effectively.

In analyzing the 1988 presidential campaign, Galston asserts that Michael Dukakis failed to campaign effectively. He strove to be affirmative, not negative. He wanted to talk about the real issues, not the phony ones. But his party had every right to expect him to do what was necessary to maximize his chance of winning.

George Bush assumed the same responsibility. His obligation was to overcome the "wimp factor" by projecting guts and strength and he succeeded. Galston admits that the spectacle was not edifying. However, he does not put the blame on the politicians but on us — We the People. "The electorate was in no mood to hear a serious discussion of the longterm problems facing the country, emotional issues such as drugs and crime dominated the agenda, and the media were determined to focus on tactics and personalities."

In my years with the system, I have been in many schools and have observed the positive effect that parent involvement brings. In one school, parents serve as volunteers helping teachers make displays, chaperoning field trips, and working with students individually on worksheets to supplement the instructional program. In that school, the imaginary "barrier" between teachers and parents is torn down. The parents support the program and everyone does better.

Teachers feel better about the program as well. When communication between teachers and parents is open, the teacher feels the support vital for a successful program. It is a natural boost for teachers to be in a classroom where children are motivated to learn. It is a boost for teachers to know that what they do in a classroom will be reinforced and supported at home. Everyone will begin to view the school and the education process positively. The end result will be positive as well — children will feel better about themselves and will view their lives as positive.

NAS Sailor Bowled Over By $10,000 Prize

Yogi (Lawrence) Berra's Brooklyn homespun axiom, "the game isn't over till it's over," proved true for Navy instructor Aviation Machinist's Mate Second Class (AD2) Mark Sandy assigned to Fighter Squadron One Hundred One Fleet Readiness Aviation Maintenance Personnel (VF-101-FRAMP), Naval Air Station Oceana.

Sandy won $10,000! It was bowling and not baseball, but Sandy played out a good game mixed with ambition, fate and the production of the movie Navy SEAL on location in Virginia Beach.

Events leading up to Sandy's winning the big prize in the East Coast Amateur Bowlers Association Tournament held recently at New Market Bowl in Newport News bordered on the bizarre.

Sandy, 26, resumed bowling, the sport of his childhood, about two years ago. Since reporting to VF-101 in April, Sandy has been playing in military and various civilian leagues.

"I've bowled no-tap tournaments, but never won. This is the first time I have ever bowled in a tournament like this."

Spotting a flyer announcing the tournament, Sandy paid $25 association fees and the $65 tournament entry fee to bowl a qualifying round. "I didn't make the cut," said Sandy. He then saw little chance of again entering the tourney because he didn't have another $65 to attempt another qualifying game.

Then fate stepped in. Production of the movie Navy SEAL on location in Virginia Beach needed "extras." Sandy's wife, Karen, is a model/actress and she was called by her talent agency to report to the film company. Filming was between 6 p.m. and 6 a.m., so Sandy went with his wife to keep her company.

"They needed someone to drive a car past Charlie Sheen on Atlantic Avenue," recalls Sandy. "I raised my hand and they picked me."

All Sandy had to do was drive. "We did about 15 takes. Every time we cut and did another take, Charlie Sheen would pull his car up right next to mine. I was probably 10 feet from him. Makeup people would come out and put makeup on him and spray his hair — and I was right next to him! I'm the first car that goes by him when he's coming down Atlantic Avenue."

For his role as an extra, Sandy made $60 — enough for him to again try another qualifying round in the tourney. This time he made the cut by nine pins.

The next day Sandy called his sister Tami in his hometown, West Palm Beach, Fla., to tell her the news and predict his win. "It made all the right sense — I didn't bowl well. I couldn't afford another $65 to try again, and then I was picked up as an extra to make just enough money to bowl again. I said, 'I'm going to win.'"

As the top qualifier in the semifinals, Sandy was guaranteed $5,000, even if he lost in the finals. "I only had to bowl one game in the finals." Psyched to win, Sandy had one more assist. The night before the tournament, a fellow instructor Aviation Machinist's Mate Chief (ADC) Dan Belzella, who recently completed massage therapy training, helped Sandy relax through massage.

Sandy, an instructor for the Navy's Fleet Replacement Squadron VF-101, teaches power plants, engines and fuels systems for the F-14. The eight-year Navyman was assigned to the Blue Angels Flight Demonstrations Team before reporting to NAS Oceana.

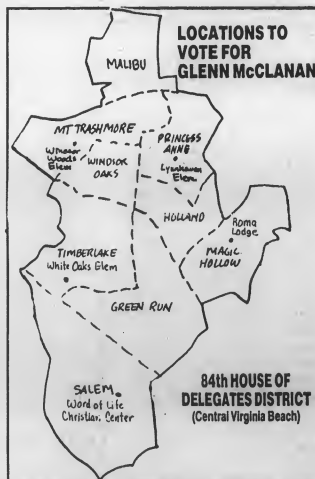

After earning less money for her roles in the production, Sandy's wife said she would go alone for future castings. Since his big win and his plans to pay off bills with some of the prize money, she may change her mind.

Using money earned driving past Charlie Sheen during the production of the movie Navy SEAL, AD2 Mark Sandy entered an amateur bowling tourney and won first prize, $10,000.

Council Not Ready For Regional Transportation

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Virginia Beach City Council members apparently are not ready to embrace the concept of a regional transportation finance authority to which the city might have to relinquish its decision-making prerogatives.

Presentation of the concept by consultants for the Southeastern Virginia and Peninsula Planning District Commissions at a work session Monday received a lukewarm reception.

Councilman John D. Moss compared the idea to the United Nations where, he said, the United States pays the bill but the other countries make the decisions. "We will be shoveling money across the border. I did not see how Virginia Beach will be served," he said he did not want to see Virginia Beach subordinated to another agency, which would require another director and another staff.

Central to the report submitted by the Washington consulting firm of Linton, Mields, Reiser and Cotone, is the establishment of a Hampton Roads Regional Transportation Finance Authority. John Hadfield, representing the consulting firm, said that tolls have to be a part of any regional strategy for financing road construction.

Various other sources of revenues — a regional gas tax, a regional sales tax, impact fees, assessment district fees, real estate transfer tax, local auto decal and local option income tax — would not be sufficient to need the 20-year highway needs of the region, Hadfield said.

All of these sources would raise $155 million a year. An intraregional toll program would generate $320 million a year, he said. The Hampton Roads area, like the northern Virginia area, faces a $2 to 2.5 billion shortfall over the next 20-year highway plan period.

Moss said that the first 25 pages of the report dwell on the Federal program. Since the Federal and State governments do not plan to raise taxes to fund the highways, he said, "we're supposed to come up with a bandaid. Moss said that Douglas Wilder said that he was not in favor of a regional authority because the roads were a state responsibility. Moss said he agrees with that.

He said that the State is now considering a one-dollar toll for the Virginia Beach Toll Road (Route 44) with proceeds destined for new projects. He said that the consultant's report left too many questions unanswered and included no discussion on land use.

Councilwoman Nancy Parker said that she can see money from Virginia Beach going to other localities.

Hadfield said that a weighing process has been suggested as well as identification of revenues with geographic localities.

Late Night Accidents Prompt Arts Center To Order New Security Gate; Some Vandalism

By Greg Goldfarb

Several nighttime incidents have prompted the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts to make plans to put up a security gate at the center's rear entrance at the end of Old Virginia Beach Boulevard.

"A lot of people cut through here," said Michael Marks, the center's director.

In addition to almost being hit twice by a car himself, Marks said the center's staff have come to work some mornings and found an abandoned car in the ditch running behind the center's parking lot.

He also said trees have been knocked down or destroyed by what appears to be merry motorists cutting between 22nd Street (at the foot of the expressway) and Parks Avenue, the main entrance to the center.

The road in question is about 2 of a mile long and snakes from 22nd Street around the center to an exit on Old Virginia Beach Boulevard. The center, large parking lots and winding main road are somewhat secluded by trees and there is not a lot of outside lighting. Marks said a swing gate will be placed only at the center's back exit.

"We just didn't want to close off," the center, Marks said. The

City Approves

For Downtown Study

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

City Council has agreed to spend $150,000 to develop the concept of a downtown business district in the Pembroke area.

The money will be used for the second design phase of a study which has been funded so far by the Central Downtown Business Association.

In addition to appropriating the money, Council adopted a resolution endorsing the concept plan prepared by CDB Association consultants, EDWA, Inc., and creation a commission to oversee the development of a master plan.

The only Council member voting against the project was Councilwoman Reba McClanahan who has said she is not convinced that the central "downtown" is the way for the city to go or that development of one area of the city will necessarily benefit the whole city.

Councilman John L. Perry abstained, he said, because he did not approve.

Only one citizen spoke against the plan, Douglas E. Braun, of 4908 Klamath Road in Pocahontas Village.

He said it was "ridiculous" to place a central business district "the 19th Street Health Clinic Moves

The health clinic on 19th Street has moved down the street to an office building across from the Radisson.

Run-Down 19th Street Health Clinic Changes Offices; 3,000 More Feet of Space

Need For New Space
Arose 10 Years Ago

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

The Virginia Beach Health Department clinic, formerly located on the corner of 19th Street and Arctic Avenue, has changed its location to the Gibson Pavilion, 1081 19th Street, suite 100.

"There's been a need for a long time," said Dr. George Sjolund, Health Department director.

According to Sjolund, the need for additional laboratory space was the main reason for the move. The old clinic had 5,000 square feet, while the new office has 8,000. The new clinic occupies the building's entire first floor.

"This will provide additional clinic exam rooms so we'll be able to see more patients with the same staff," he said.

The old building, which has housed the Health Department since before Virginia Beach became a city, was "in poor condition," according to Sjolund. A house was added onto the back of the building 15 years ago to provide additional space, which Sjolund said was not a good design, and the heating and cooling system often didn't work.

"It didn't provide the space or basic facilities for health care," Sjolund said.

Rescue: Beach-Based Team Is One-Of-A-Kind; Wins Award

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Two years ago, the Virginia Beach Fire Department thought about trying to establish a regional rescue team. Now, that idea has transformed into the Tidewater Regional Trench and Collapse Rescue Team, a multi-jurisdictional unit with personnel from Virginia Beach, Chesapeake, Portsmouth, Norfolk and the Little Creek Naval Amphibious Base.

The team, founded by the Tidewater Emergency Medical Services Council, consists of a core team of 30 career personnel and a 25-member support team of career and volunteer personnel. The unit is capable of handling special rescue situations involving trench and excavation collapses, building collapses, confined space rescues and above ground, and high angle or vertical rescues.

"Because of the nature of the incidents we handle, we probably only go out 12 to 14 times a year as a team," said Chas Sargent, regional team operations commander.

The team responds to calls in Virginia Beach, Chesapeake, Norfolk, Portsmouth and military installations, as well as locations out of state. The team was recently on call to assist during the Armenian earthquake and traveled to

"There are only 10 teams capable of handling these types of incidents in the country," Sargent said.

Charleston, S.C., after Hurricane Hugo hit, "to help clear the streets," Sargent said. They were also on call for 52 hours to go help with the earthquake tragedy in San Francisco.

"It just wasn't that massive of a problem out there," Sargent said.

In order to become a member of the rescue team, a person must be a minimum firefighter III, an emergency medical technician or a paramedic. Sargent said the job also requires extensive training, knowledge of specialized equipment and technical expertise.

"It takes a team concept," said Sargent, who is also a battalion chief and paramedic for the Virginia Beach Fire Department. Prospective team members must also complete 100-plus hours of a "Heavy and Tactical Rescue" program, as well as being nominated by their departments.

After becoming a team member,

80 hours per year of continuing educational training is required.

The team's equipment, which includes a 24-foot Wells Cargo trailer and a truck that pulls it, air shore, breathing apparatus, breaching equipment and patient care removal devices, is provided by the private sector. C&P Telephone Company, Hampton Roads Utility Contractors Association and the Contractors Exchange donated the equipment, which would have cost taxpayers over $100,000.

"It's a variety of equipment that's not found on any other vehicle," Sargent said of the trucks that are housed at Fire Station 10 off Providence Road.

The team is the only one in the United States of its type which operates on a regional concept, Sargent said. This provides the Hampton Roads area with a critical and specialized service without burdening any one jurisdiction with the total cost of the service. All five jurisdictions pay the salaries, benefits and training time of the team members, which totals $1.2 million.

"There are only 10 teams capable of handling these types of incidents in the country," Sargent said. "It's hard to get four cities to cooperate on anything."

The regional rescue team has

Kjellstrom And Lee, Inc. Are Low Bidder; Council Awards Other Contracts

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Kjellstrom and Lee, Inc., has been awarded the contract for the 200-bed addition to the Correction Center for $9,664,000, the low bid of eight.

The base bid is three percent below the architect's estimate and nine percent below the highest bidder.

Other contracts awarded by City Council Monday included:

• Conrad Brothers Construction, Inc., for the Boardwalk connector parks, Phase III, for $849,500, the low bid of three. The project includes improvements from 33rd to 38th Street and improvements to 34th Street Park and the connector Parks at 27th and 35th Streets.

• VICO Construction Corporation, for the Landstown Section Main, for $866,876.45, the low bid of three. The contract is for the construction of 12,300 linear feet of 24-inch and 1,000 linear feet of 20-inch water transmission main to provide for additional pumping capacity at the Landstown Pump Station.

• North Landing Line Construction Company for the resort streetscape demonstration construction of the Virginia Power Condominium for $622,220.34, the low bid of seven. The construction of the Virginia Power Duct Bank is for the underground relocation of Virginia Power's facilities from 19th Street to 15th Street on Atlantic including 17th and 19th Streets.

• Chesapeake Bay Contractors for the city gateway project, for $42,981.30, the low bid of three. The project includes road improvements to Parks Avenue and Route 44, part of the Visitor Information Center Resort Area project.

• Asphalt Roads and Materials Co., Inc., for resurfacing for the 1989-90 fiscal year, for $465,586.50, the low bid of four.

The contract will resurface 32.86 lane miles of city streets.

• Councilman Albert Balko registered concern at a Capital Budget work session Monday about the effect a proposed mega-development on Elbow Road in Chesapeake would have on Virginia Beach roads. The development under consideration would involve the combined holdings of E.S. Garcia and E.G. Moore.

• Part of the irony in justifying the cost-efficiency of a sewer project, said Councilman John A. Baum, is that the richer people are, the more they pay for lots, the more they run up the price, the more the project is justified.

No Sewers In Sandbridge Until 1997

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

By the most optimistic estimates sewer will not be available in Sandbridge for eight years.

In the meantime, Councilwoman Barbara Henley asked, is there anything that can be done to alleviate pollution in Back Bay.

City Manager Aubrey V. Watts Jr. said that some options are being considered.

Public Utilities Director Clarence Warnstaff said that the project was included in the proposed Capital Improvement Program to allow for the initial design of the $16,763,000 project in the fifth year of the five-year budget. Warnstaff said that construction would be three years from then.

At a budget workshop Monday, Warnstaff also said that the city has 30 active sewer installation projects. The cost of installation per lot, he said, averages $12,000. The city will get back $1,800 from a typical home with the difference made up over a period of time by payments from everyone in the system.

The Commission

Virginia Beach Mayor Meyera Oberndorf, according to what the Norfolk newspaper is reporting, is taking some heat in the accountability-to-the-public-and-the-city-council-members department over how she worked with the chief of police and city manager in managing this year's Labor Day unrest.

Clearly, the 17-member Labor Day Review Commission will be pushed by the public to pin the blame of the tragedy of what happened this year on somebody who was in a decision-making position. And unfortunately for Oberndorf, she is very visible. But all of these people who are talking that talk, and pushing special interest positions, should soon come to realize that what happened last Labor Day in Virginia Beach was the closest event to a natural disaster the city has ever experienced.

But what's really troubling is that nothing this commission can do will influence whether or not the same visitors who came here for the last two years, will return.

Next Labor Day will probably be somewhat similar, but hopefully with less violence, to last Labor Day. The students will come, the police will be ready, and the hardest decisions to be made will be those made by business people who must decide whether to open or not. —G.D.G.

Skip Wilkins Receives 1989 Victory Awards

Virginia Beach's Alfred T. "Skip" Wilkins, Jr., has been named one of six national recipients of the 1989 Victory Awards, sponsored by the National Rehabilitation Hospital here and bestowed annually on those individuals recognized for their personal triumphs over adversity.

Wilkins, now 40 and a quadriplegic since a water-skiing accident after his high school graduation, was recently honored at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts with five other national winners: country singer Barbara Mandrell, U.S. Sen. Daniel K. Inouye of Hawaii, international entertainer Julio Iglesias, artist/writer Joni Eareckson Tada, and disabled athlete Bill Demby.

Wilkins, selected as the recipient of the 1988 Virginia State Victory Award, becomes the first state recipient to be named a national winner.

Following months of rehabilitation after his accident, Wilkins worked to become one of the world's premier wheelchair athletes. He holds regional, national and world records in numerous events and continues to compete and help train other disabled athletes. His book, The Real Race, chronicles how his family, his wife and his faith helped him rise above his disability.

In 1982 he formed his own company and today he lectures to youth groups, community organizations and Fortune 500 companies throughout the United States and in numerous foreign countries. In addition, he devotes much of his time to volunteer efforts on behalf of the nation's disabled.

He is a spokesperson for President Bush's Points of Light volunteer program, is on the board of directors of the South Hampton Roads Volunteer Action Center and has been Virginia Beach's Volunteer of the Year.

Recently he was named by a cable television station as a 1989 Greater Citizen of Hampton Roads and the Mayor Meyera E. Oberndorf has proclaimed Nov. 6 as "Skip Wilkins Day" in honor of his achievements and contributions.

Economic Development Logo Debuts

The City of Virginia Beach Department of Economic Development has unveiled its new logo.

The distinctive new mark is designed to capture the essence of the city's coastal heritage and symbolize a vibrant and forward-thinking Virginia Beach, capable of successfully competing in the nation's economic development arena.

The logo is expected to project a corporate image which will play an important role in positioning Virginia Beach as a contemporary city committed to forging strong business relationships.

The new logo will be rendered primarily in a neon evergreen color and will be incorporated as a major graphic element in all of the department's stationery, advertising, marketing brochures and video presentations.

A member of the creative team responsible for developing the design, Stephen Spurgeon, reportedly said the symbol epitomizes the "less is more" axiom. Other members of the design team included Lynn Harrisburger and Chris Overholzer.

The Polizos Agency of Norfolk created the logo.

VWC Hosts College Day

Virginia Wesleyan College is hosting its fall College Day program on Saturday, Nov. 11.

The open house will provide an opportunity for high school juniors and seniors and their parents to visit the campus, meet members of the faculty, administration and student body, and to discuss academic programs, financial aid, extra-curricular activities and social life at the college.

There is no charge for the lunch of other events included in the open house. Students and parents interested in attending should make reservations by calling the admissions office at 455-3208.

The day-long event begins with registration from 9 to 9:30 a.m. in the gymnasium. The program will open with greetings from President Lambuth M. Clarke.

A tour of the campus begins at 9:50 a.m. The Faculty Involvement Session will begin at 11:20 a.m. with lunch being served at 12:30 p.m. After lunch there will be a session on financial aid from 1:15 to 2 p.m.

The bookstore and snack bar will be open for the convenience of participants.

VWC Cookbook On Sale

The Women of Wesleyan cookbook, WOW It's Wonderful, will be on sale by the organization on Saturday, Nov. 11, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., in the housewares department of Leggett's at Military and Lynnhaven shopping malls.

WOW members will prepare many of the recipes in the book for shoppers to sample. The cookbooks are $6 each at the Leggett's sale. They may also be ordered from Virginia Wesleyan College by calling 455-3287. There will be an additional charge of $1 for mailing costs when ordered by phone.

The Women of Wesleyan organization is a support group for Virginia Wesleyan College, founded in 1967 by women in the Hampton Roads area. Each year the group sponsors several fund-raising activities, including an annual WOW Flea Market and a WOW Fashion Show (scheduled this year for Nov. 16). Over the years, these events have raised $84,889 for many projects at the College.

Proceeds from the sale of the cookbook will be used to establish a second Women of Wesleyan endowed scholarship fund for VWC students.

Books Are Important To A Child's Development

The Mayor's Report

Virginia Beach Mayor
The Honorable
Meyera Oberndorf

Books are important to your child's development. Did you realize that the more your child reads at home, the more likely your child will do well in school? Unfortunately the average child spends only four minutes per day at home reading, whereas the same child spends 130 minutes per day watching television.

Your child's academic and career success depends on language skills. Jim Trelease, author of the popular The Read-Aloud Handbook, points out that if your child only hears language spoken by favorite television characters, then he or she will tend to model his or her own speech on these television characters. Yet the language your child is asked to read, write, and speak first in school and later in the business world is not this "TV talk," but rather "book talk." Exposure to the language of books is essential to a child's ability to do well in school and the working world.

How can you as a parent encourage your child to read? The answer is simple. Read aloud to your child, no matter how young. Essential listening skills begin to develop during the first year of life. Read aloud to your baby. Choose books with simple, bright pictures to catch his or her eye. Read aloud your favorite version of Mother Goose rhymes. Your child may not understand all the words, but will enjoy the melody of verses, the repetition of the rhymes. For babies, the sound of the words is more important than the content.

Did you know that 50 percent of your child's mental development occurs between birth and four years old? Sharing books with toddlers and preschoolers is important. Some parents who weren't read to as children may think that introducing a child to books is a teacher's responsibility. Unfortunately, by the time they begin school, these children may lag as much as 21 years behind in reading readiness as their peers who were read to at home. Trying hard to make up for that deficiency, these children often experience failure in learning to read. They may fall further and further behind as they struggle through school.

However, once your child begins to read on his or her own, don't stop reading aloud to your child. Beware of the "Readers at Risk Syndrome" that first may affect your six, seven, or eight year old. A child who eagerly en-

American Education Week In Its 68th Year

The VBEA Report

By Clair Polley,
President of the Virginia
Beach Education Association

This November will mark the 68th consecutive year our nation has taken time to honor the extraordinary contributions America's public schools have made to our nation by celebrating American Education Week. VBEA is proud to have been a part of this annual celebration each and every year.

In recent weeks, the president, in meetings with federal and state officials, has been examining the strengths and weaknesses and promised to make excellence in America's public schools a national priority. Educational excellence should be a national goal. But excellence in education can't be mandated. It's an ongoing process that requires direct involvement by parents, community leaders and school employees at the school building level. And since its inception 68 years ago, that's what American Education Week has attempted to do.

In 1919, the American Legion, the National Education Association, and the U.S. Office of Education discussed launching an education campaign to solicit public support essential to correcting identified weaknesses in our educational system. World War I draft boards had discovered that about 25 percent of draftees were illiterate and about 29 percent were physically unfit. As a result, a series of conferences that began in 1920 led to a plan for an annual nationwide observance honoring education in the United States.

The first American Education Week was held Dec. 4 through 10, 1921, with NEA and the American Legion as the co-sponsors.

The first American Education Week was held Dec. 4 through 10, 1921, with NEA and the American Legion as the co-sponsors. In 1922, the U.S. Office of Education became an AEW co-sponsor. Today, the U.S. Department of Education and 11 national organizations are co-sponsors of American Education Week. These co-sponsors are the NEA, The National PTA, the American Legion, the American Association of School Administrators, the National School Boards Association, the American Federation of Teachers, the Council of Chief State School Officers, the National School Public Relations Association, the National Association of State Boards of Education, the National Association of Elementary School Principals and the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

Early American Education Week programs featured daily topics based on fundamental educational purposes and objectives. From 1929 through 1968,

Virginia Military Institute Observes Its Sesquicentennial

By Lillian Youell,
Virginia Beach Constitution
Celebration Commission
Consultant

When I took up the Quill as a Virginia Beach Sun columnist, the agreement was that I would have a First Amendment Freeway to write about historic, patriotic, and educational subjects, generally, bowing of course to local interest.

Noting that Nov. 11, 1989 was oncoming, it was immediately clear to me that I needed to dwell on the Sesquicentennial of the Virginia Military Institute. What more historic, patriotic and educational topic could I target?

Personal bias aside, I refuse to be swayed by the fact that my father-in-law (VMI '14) was first captain, class president, captain of the football team and the first head of Virginia's Correctional System, which he served for 38 years; or, that subsequent graduates included my husband (VMI '43) and two sons (VMI '71 and '72) with a grandson provisionally accepted for the class of 2001.

Of the large number of graduates who reside in our city, five are prominent in alumni affairs. Edward B. Burwell, '50B, is a member of the VMI Foundation Board of Trustees, as is George G. Phillips, Jr., '60. Charles F. McCallum, Jr., '68, is chapter representative and his "Brother Rat," W. Bogart Holland, serves as second vice president, VMI Keydet Club. Donald E. Sharpe, '74, is regional director, alumni association.

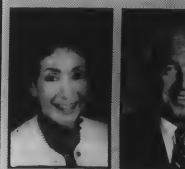

In the current Corps, there are 37 cadets from Virginia Beach. One of Mayor Meyera Oberndorf asked who would serve on a regional body, how public accountability would come about, whether the authority would locate roads in addition to raising funds and whether elected officers would lose their authority to make decisions.

Hadfield admitted that the report did not get down to details, that the main purpose was raising money. Accountability has to be there, he conceded, and either elected officials or their appointees should be involved.

The Richmond Authority, which includes Chesterfield and Henrico Counties, is the closest model selected for comparison. He said that each of the counties has two members on the Authority and Richmond has six with one appointed by the Virginia Department of Transportation (VDOT).

Councilwoman Barbara Henley asked how the localities would use their growth plans to determine where the roads should go.

Hadfield said that the consultants see the Authority as a financial agency and that it would use the regional highway plan developed by the Southeastern Virginia Planning District as a guide. The Authority would not initiate new road programs, he said.

Moss said that he did not see in the report a delineation of limitations.

Councilwoman Reba McClanahan pointed out that the Richmond Authority determined what the tolls should be in advance, but the original estimates have doubled. The reason the Richmond Authority worked, she said, is that the localities reached agreement before going to the General Assembly and there was something in the plan for all concerned.

Moss also thought that the recommendation of the report that legislation be sought from the 1990 General Assembly was premature. "We're a long way from even looking at a specific bill. I don't think a regional agency is necessary while VDOT exists. It's not necessary," he also said that the public should be aware of the tax implications. Council has scheduled a briefing for next Monday.

The report states that for the first time in 39 years the entire federal highway program may be restructured because funding for construction of the interstate system should be completed by 1992. Much of the interstate system, Hadfield said, is deteriorating. If the State has to foot the bill for rehabilitation, it will mean $300,000 to $350,000 less will be available for other projects, Hadfield said. The Virginia road program, he said, has increased over the past ten years more than others throughout the country, but some regional funding sources have to be created. In the process, he said, localities must be assured that they are dealt with in an equitable manner. He said that now federal law does not permit tolls on interstates, but that an effort should be made to remove that condition. He said that transportation needs in Hampton Roads must be of interest to the Department of Defense with in an equitable manner.

Hassell also said that the private sector should be encouraged more to participation in solving the transportation problems. "We often don't exploit private resources."

The resolution states that while the council endorses the concept plan it does not endorse all of the specifics in the plan.

The master plan will address the geographic boundaries of the CBD, zoning and density of land within the CBD and land use within the place them.

most congested area of the city." He said that the people who live in the area do want more noise, fumes and garbage. He said the people wanted to see details.

He was concerned about what would happen to Pocomantas Village, a residential neighborhood located on the fringes of the district. "I would like to know where the traffic is going to move, where the parking will be provided. I can't see why anyone would want to come here," he said he wanted to know where the buildings would be, what heights they would be.

Rae LeSene, of Kempville, said that he was excited about introducing new industry to the city, but was concerned that the development might not be developed as planned. Of the "villages" in the plan, he said, nothing has been said about how this concept would be accomplished.

He said that part of the commission's task should be to say how the plan will function. He also said that if all the taxes from the area are plowed back into the district, the benefit to the whole city would be ill.

Councilman John D. Moss, who has been enthusiastic about the concept, said that Council shares the same concerns. He said that the existing residential areas will not be modified. The district would be required to identify a finance plan. He also wants to be sure the "picture we see is the picture we get."

He said that one of the pluses of the concept is that it would work with or without a light rail system. The $150,000 appropriation, he said, is the maximum the city will give and may actually be less. He said that the number of people who will serve on the commission will make sure that the citizens are heard.

Vice Mayor Robert V. Fentress said that he did not think that the area should be known as "downtown," and that another name should be specified, something that could be left to the Commission.

Mayor Meyera Oberndorf said that the area is not necessarily a "downtown," but an activity center to widen the economic base of the city. The idea, she added, is to enhance neighborhoods and not to re-

L.A. Art Collection On Display At Arts Center

An exhibition of 39 works of contemporary art from the Los Angeles-based Frederick R. Weisman Art Foundation will be shown at the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts Friday, Nov. 17, through Jan. 28, 1990.

The exhibition is titled An Eclectic Eye: Selections from the Frederick R. Weisman Art Foundation. A festive public reception will be held on Friday, Dec. 1, from 7 to 10 p.m. at the Center. It is free and open to the public.

Organized by Nora Halpern Brounger, curator of the Weisman Art Foundation, as a mini survey of some major developments in art since the 1960s, the exhibition reflects the composition of the overall foundation collection of more than 300 objects by combining works by well-known artists with a number of pieces by artists who have gained recognition only in recent years. It also includes examples of the work of some artists whose talents are just beginning to be noticed.

Among the artists represented in the show are Christo, Sam Francis, Gilbert and George, Red Grooms, Alex Katz, Ellsworth Kelly, Robert Motherwell, James Rosenquist, Edward Ruscha, Andy Warhol and Tom Wesselmann.

Also included are a number of artists whose work has become recognized relatively recently, such as the late Jean-Michel Basquiat, Louis Chase, Sandro Chia, Jedd Garet, Cheryl Laemmle, Gary Stephen and Richard Thompson. In addition, the exhibition features examples of the work of several emerging artists, including a canvas by a young Soviet "underground" artist, Andrei Krisanov.

The Foundation collection is the newest of three art collections assembled by the Los Angeles businessman and philanthropist, Frederick R. Weisman. The others are Weisman's personal collection, which contains numerous works by 20th century masters with an emphasis on American art of the 1950s and 1960s; and a corporate collection, which focuses mainly on American and Japanese contemporary art and is housed at the Weisman company headquarters in Maryland. The director of the Frederick R. Weisman Art Foundation is Henry T. Hopkins, former director of the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art.

The touring program of the Weisman Art Foundation is unique. No other privately gathered, American-owned assemblage of international contemporary art travels the world on such a scale. And, at Weisman's express wish, the exhibitions travel for the most part of communities that have limited or even no access to original examples of significant art of our time.

Following its presentation at the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts, An Eclectic Eye will travel to the Gibbs Art Gallery in Charleston, S.C. (March 9 through May 4); and the Arkansas Arts Center in Little Rock, Ark. (July 5 through Aug. 12, 1990).

Prior to its Virginia Beach showing, the exhibition was on view at the University of Wyoming Art Museum in Laramie, the Boise Art Museum in Idaho, the Cheney Cowles Museum in Spokane, Wash.; and in two parts simultaneously, at the Bridge Center for Contemporary Art in El Paso, Tx., and the New Mexico State University Art Gallery in Las Cruces.

Area Violinist Premiers Recital At Arts Center

Violinist Lawrence Mednick will give a recital of classical French and contemporary American music on Tuesday, Nov. 28 at 8 p.m. at the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts.

This concert is the first of several upcoming performing arts programs at the center. A public reception follows the recital.

Included are sonatas by Handel and Brahms; works by Claude Debussy, celebrating the 1989 bicentennial of the French Revolution; and suites by American composers Robert Russell Bennett and John Duffy.

American composer John Duffy — whose musical scores have been described as memorable, haunting and brilliant — is internationally acclaimed. His Heritage Symphonic Dances have been arranged for violin and piano for this event by nationally renowned conductor Richard Williams. Mednick will play several portions: Rabbit's Dance, Renaissance Dance, and Spanish Dance. This recital is the premier of the arranged Heritage Symphonic Dances, which will be subsequently featured in a November performance at New York City's Lincoln Center.

The suite Hexapoda, by Robert Russell Bennett, includes 1940s-style pieces with whimsical titles such as Gut Bucket Gus, Jane Shakes Her Hair, and Jim Lives.

Mednick, a sculptor, businessman, and active in public service, began his musical career at age 10. He has been a member of the critically acclaimed Feldman String Quartet, based in Hampton Roads and traveling throughout Virginia and other states. Through a program organized by Young Audiences of Virginia, Mednick has appeared in over 300 concerts in Tidewater schools.

Admission is $2 for Center members, $4 for non-members, payable the evening of the recital. Mednick will donate a portion of the concert fees to the Center in support of membership.

The Virginia Beach Center for the Arts is located at 22nd Street and Park Avenue, opposite the Pavilion Convention Center, at the foot of the west-bound entrance to Route 44. Telephone the Center for the Arts at 425-000 for further information.

Henderson Performs At Pavilion

Skitch Henderson, principal Pops conductor of The Virginia Symphony Pops, will conduct an evening of George Gershwin music Sunday, Nov. 19 at 3 p.m. at the Pavilion Convention Center.

Featured on the program is internationally-acclaimed pianist Susan Starr who was the 1962 silver medalist in the Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow. Starr will play Gershwin's Concerto in F. Other selections are from an American in Paris, Gershwin on Broadway and Cuban Overture.

Henderson, who is founder of the New York Pops, conducts sold out concerts in Carnegie Hall each season. This is his fourth season bringing light-classical programming to Hampton Roads with The Virginia Symphony Pops.

Tickets are $6 to $25 and are available by calling 623-2310 (Southside) or 380-0040 (Peninsula).

main entrance will always be open.

But if a car is caught late at night back there, Marks said, hopefully police will stop and question the motorist since they can't get out the back way.

There is also a pedestrian path which cuts through the center's east grounds. That will not be blocked, even though recently vandals kicked out outer glass and bulbs in lights built into the stone pathway markers.

Marks would not discuss specific security measures, but said the center employs one security guard, and that sometimes the center is secured seven days a week, 24 hours a day. The security schedule is flexible.

Marks said he has not "seen" any damaged works of art in the center and no one has ever been arrested for vandalism. Neither has anyone ever attempted to break into the center, he said. He did say that there has been evidence of people drinking and apparently partying on center grounds after it has closed.

But mainly, Marks said, the new road block is designed to "eliminate late night auto accidents."

Marks said there will not be a "no trespassing" sign put up, but rather, one indicating that Parks Avenue is a dead end street.

David Grochmal, the city's director of general services, confirms that the center will be receiving a new security gate.

"We're planning to, yes," he said.

Grochmal said he received phone calls from Marks, explaining the situation. Grochmal said the building is quite secure, but that there may be a need for more exterior lighting.

The city cannot put a gate across a public street, Grochmal said, so the tip of Old Virginia Beach Boulevard, which runs from the center west to Birdneck Road, will have to be closed. Street closing procedures, Grochmal said, may take several months to complete. A gate, therefore, may not be up until the first of next year.

The center opened to the public last April.

This western tip of Old Virginia Beach Boulevard, which is the back entrance and exit to the center, will be blocked after the road is closed.

These gates, when closed, are supposed to keep people from the center's courtyard after dark.

Health Clinic

"It didn't provide the space or basic facilities for health care," Sjolund said.

The new office has ample room for equipment in the exam rooms and additional lab space. The full-time staff of 12 and several part-timers will provide pediatric care for sick and well babies, income-based family planning, prenatal care, non-income based immunizations and WIC, a food supplement program for low income women and children.

"It's better designed for a medical office," Sjolund said of the first-floor clinic, which is being modified by the owner.

The renting of the new clinic was approved by the state this past summer, but the Health Department began searching for an office space 11 years ago. Actually, Sjolund said, the need for a new office arose 10 years ago, when the city of Virginia Beach these, David R. Yockel, Jr., class of '90, is third Battalion S-1. It is reported that the Tidewater areas has the largest number of VMI cadets and graduates than any other area.

A dear friend and a member of my Lynnhaven Parish Chapter DAR is another local resident with a special link to The Institute. Miss Laura T. Lejeune, is the daughter of the late Major General A. Lejeune, USMC, who served as VMI's fifth superintendent. Lejeune Hall at VMI and the Marine Base in North Carolina honor his memory.

Founded in 1839 as the nation's first state military college, VMI has had a unique history. The Institute's traditions have ranged from the serious to the light - from the Battle of New Market in which the Corps fought as a unit, later memorialized on a giant mural in the Chapel at VMI, to the comedy, Brother Rat, which played on Broadway and later starred Ronald Founded in 1839 as the nation's first state military college, VMI has had a unique history.

Reagan in the film version.

"Stonewall" Jackson, an early VMI professor, is a part of its historic and patriotic traditions. The impressive George C. Marshall Museum honors another distinguished graduate who served as five-star general, chief of staff of the Army in World War II, and developed the Marshall Plan to assist the war-torn countries of Europe following that conflict. For his service in implementing the Plan while serving as Secretary of State, he received the Nobel Peace Prize.

All students at VMI are members of the Corps of Cadets and participate in officer training programs associated with Army, Naval or Air Force ROTC. The citizen-soldiers of VMI have displayed their patriotism in positions of leadership in business, government and in the Armed Forces.

The Institute has provided national, state and city officials from chief executive officer of AT&T, to congressmen, mayors and city managers as well as military leaders, such as the chief of staff, the deputy chief of staff of the United States Army in World War II and two commandants of the U.S. Marine Corps. Six medal of honor recipients attest to the valor of those who have had the VMI experience.

In this field of education, VMI has outstripped many large universities by producing a remarkable nine Rhodes Scholars. All academic courses are taught by fulltime faculty members, 80 percent of whom hold doctorate degrees. Successful completion of the VMI program enables cadets to enter many civilian professions, the Armed Forces, or to continue at graduate, medical and law schools. VMI graduates have become outstanding teachers, professors, deans and university presidents.

On the occasion of VMI's Centennial, Nov. 11, 1939, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt addressed the Corps, stating, "The history of VMI is a triumphal march of the part which the citizen soldier can play in a democracy... Live up to your great heritage, your noble record and your simple faith throughout the second century that lies before you."

In recent years, a monument has been placed on the grounds by the Sons of the Cincinnati in recognition of the concept of the citizen-soldier which continues to lie at the heart of the VMI experience.

Now for the $64,000 question. Should women be admitted to the Institute as cadets? My family advisors unanimously say that to do so would destroy a 150 years of tradition, and attempt to create one more co-ed military academy, like the ones on the Seven and Hudson Rivers.

Finally, I wish every reader could attend a home football game at The Institute. Win or lose, at the close of the contest, the Regimental Band plays the Doolittle. Everyone stands at attention in the stands and on the field, then joins in singing, "Red, white and yellow floats on high, the Institute shall never die, God bless our team and VMI." It always brings tears to my eyes.

joyed books as a preschooler may relish the day when he or she can read independently. Unfortunately, the interests of a child this age far outstrip his or her rather limited reading skills. Left to his or her own limitations, the child may become bored with books.

As a parent, you can take steps to prevent this not only by praising your child's limited reading skills, but also by continuing to read aloud those books that are beyond his or her reading ability but still hold high interest for your child. Keep the thrill of books alive for your beginning reader.

Pick interesting, not boring, stories. Don't hesitate to read a favorite book over and over again. Most of all, make time to read aloud to your child every day. Just before bedtime often works well, or perhaps before or after a nap. As a child grows, reading aloud a book while traveling in a car on vacation works well. Holidays can be a traditional time to gather the family and read aloud a specially chosen book.

Let your children see you reading. Give books as presents. Bring your child to the Virginia Beach Public Library and let him or her select books to take home and read. Consult books like Choosing Books For Kids: Choosing The Right Book For The Right Child At The Right Time, by Joanne Oppenheim, for suggestions of titles to interest babies through 12-year olds, or Comics To Classics: A Parent's Guide To Books For Teen and Preteens, by Arthea Reed, to help interest teens in reading. These titles and more are available at any one of our Virginia Beach public libraries. Don't hesitate to ask a helpful librarian for assistance.

National Children's Book Week is Nov. 13 through 19 this year. What better time to help ensure the future of our young people in Virginia Beach by introducing them to the benefits and pleasures of a book?

representatives of the cosponsoring organizations chose a general theme with supporting subtopics. Beginning in 1969, the cosponsors chose a theme of national concern for each year. This year's theme - Liberty and Learning - seeks to focus public awareness on the interrelationship of America's role as leader of the free world and strength of America's public schools.

Our Public Schools are a national treasure and an invaluable resource to the community that must be nurtured if they are to meet the challenges of the future and continue providing the foundation for our national success. American Education Week provides all of us the opportunity to bring to the attention of our communities the many activities of the local educational system. It provides us with the opportunity to celebrate "Liberty and Learning" in every school. The observance serves to increase public understanding and appreciation of our city's public schools, to encourage parents to become involved, and to build civic and community support to improve education. But American Education Week isn't the culmination of those efforts. Instead, it serves as an annual renewal of our nation's commitment to public education. Local involvement in the activities and celebrations can convincingly demonstrate that it is truly we the people who are building schools together and we the people are dedicated to "Learn and Liberty."

"It's Unbelievable"

Marshall's Owner Reports Several Vandalism Incidents While Waiting For Certain Parts Of The Hotel To Be Torn Down

—VBS Staff Report

"I don't think that Virginia Beach is a better place because Marshall's is gone," said owner John C. Rogers.

But gone it is, or soon will be after the bulldozers get rolling. In the meantime, Rogers is busy selling lots for people to build houses or duplexes on, and vandals are working to tear away the remains of the 50-year-old Virginia Beach "landmark."

"I'm telling you, it's unbelievable," Rogers said from his office at the hotel. Vandals, in their mid-teens and apparently local North End kids, are "having a field day," since word that the hotel is scheduled to be razed got out.

Rogers said that in the last few weeks, he has chased people away several times. He even found people stealing plants and shrubs which, Rogers said, he made them replant.

One of the problems, Rogers said, is that the vandals assumed that the entire Marshall's structure would be demolished. But the main, three-story house will not be torn down and has in fact already been sold.

"They (the vandals) assumed the whole place would be demolished." Vandals have torn out windows, doors, electrical and plumbing materials and even spray painted the swimming pool.

Rogers said he knows the names of some of the vandals and has contracted some of their families. He said that early one morning, about 3 a.m., he found a yellow school bus at the hotel, unloading several people with crowbars and other tools in order to strip a few more things from the hotel. He ran them away.

Many of the hotel's furnishings and equipment were auctioned a little while ago, with somewhere around 10,000 items selling for a total of about $25,000.

Rogers said he has not pushed the Virginia Beach police to make arrests for the vandalism.

Master Police Officer Lewis Thurston, spokesman for the Virginia Beach Police Department, said vandalism of this sort is not unusual. However, unless a property owner can identify the vandal and wants to press charges, there is little the police can do.

Police officers on patrol, Thurston said, "try as best they can" to keep a watchful eye on vacated property, but adds that the police "can't be everywhere."

On a related note, until about 18 years ago, Thurston said, police officers would conduct "house checks" for those residents who were away from their homes for extended lengths of time. Now, however, due to the size and population of Virginia Beach, the practice is no longer feasible.

Thurston also said that property owners may not legally use firearms or force to keep people off their property. He said that it's a public misconception that a person may shoot another person while protecting their home or business.

"Unless you are in fear of your life," Thurston said, an individual has no right to shoot another. People whose property may be in danger should call the police immediately, and retreat as far as possible. "As harsh as that sounds," Thurston said, that is the only legitimate recourse the public has.

State University Legislative Proposals; City Needs State Supported School

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

A state university in Virginia Beach has been added to the legislative proposals which will be presented to the 1990 General Assembly.

Councilman John D. Moss, who initiated the proposal, said that Virginia Beach Senator Clarence Holland has agreed to sponsor appropriate legislation.

The city will request the General Assembly to identify a site for the location of a state-supported four-year university in the central portion of the city, preferably adjacent to major highways such as the proposed Southeastern Expressway.

Assistant City Manager Robert Mathias, who outlined the legislative proposals at the Council session, said that approximately 100 acres would be needed to start the project with the construction date projected for later this century. He pointed out that Virginia Beach is one of the major cities in the country with a population of more than 200,000 that does not have a four-year state supported university within its borders.

He said that the population is expected to reach 500,000 by the year 2000.

He said that although Virginia Beach is served by Old Dominion University and Norfolk State University, both in Norfolk, they are as much as 35 miles away from some Beach citizens. Among the considerations are increased transportation problems making commuting difficult, especially from the southern portion of the city which is the greatest distance from the Norfolk universities and where the greatest growth is occurring.

The city is recommending that the site should be adequate for any possible expansion through the year 2050.

Among other legislative proposals:

- The city wants the General Assembly to allow localities to continue to use the real estate tax or any other tax to raise revenues, and also to allow localities greater flexibility in raising revenues by providing other methods of taxation that are equitable and less regressive.

Labor Day Review Commission's Hearings May Be ON Cable TV

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The remaining public sessions of the 17-member Virginia Beach Labor Day Review Commission may be broadcast over Cable TV.

At the suggestion of Councilman John A. Baum, who said that previous sessions of the commission should have been carried by TV, City Council unanimously to ask the Commission to consider requesting a local cable station to carry the public hearings over its public access channel.

The broadcasts would start with the Nov. 16 public hearing. Another public hearing is scheduled for Nov. 20. Both will start at 7 p.m. at the Pavilion Theater.

Baum said that the impact of the hearings is more effective when citizens can view the sessions on TV. The sessions, he said, may continue for hours leaving few people lingering to the end.

Baum first asked whether the hearings could be broadcast over the city's TV channel.

City Manager Aubrey V. Watts Jr. said that the city channel is really a municipal access channel and does not have remote capabilities to transfer signals. He said that each time a tape has to be changed, there's a gap in the film, and somebody gets upset. He said that the Labor Day hearings are a regional issue and may be covered more appropriately by the privately-owned public access channel. He said that if the city filmed portions of the deliberations, it would have problems.

The month also included the notation that verbatim transcripts of

Lynnhaven Lion Billy Morris Busy Brightening Others' Days

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

"It's a day you're doing something to help brighten the day for somebody else, somebody less fortunate than you are. That is the bottom line," said Bay Lake Pines resident Billy Morris.

And brighten the day he did. Morris, along with several members of his Lynnhaven Lions Club recently hosted eight senior citizens from the Luther Manor retirement home on World Service Day. The day is sponsored by Lions Clubs in 159 countries around the globe.

Morris, who owns a 24-foot enclosed pontoon party boat, took the seniors for a sailing expedition around Lake Joyce. The boat features a dinette, and a refrigerator, which stored the hamburgers, hot dogs, potato salad, cole slaw, crab meat, chips, soda and cake that was served to the guests.

"Most of the men are pretty old," Morris said. "They look forward to it every year."

The Lynnhaven Lions have been working with the Luther Manor residents for three or four years now. Before then, Morris took it upon himself to help others who are less fortunate.

Morris, who has been active in the Lions Club for 39 years, started out helping retarded people.

"I started giving them a party on my own just to help them out. They liked it," he said. "There was a little girl in that group that was totally blind. It was just pitiful."

Because he was hosting these fun days during the week, it was hard for the children to be able to attend, so the days out on the boat came to an end. So Morris went out searching for another organization to take under his wing. Finally, the minister of the United Church of Christ referred him to Luther Manor, and the whole club became involved.

There are over a dozen Lions Clubs, whose main project is to help the blind, in Virginia Beach. Morris' club has 39 members. There are 39 clubs in its district, which extends as far as Williams-

City Plans On A Middle School System By 1992

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The State mandate to establish the middle school concept in the State's school system will do more than any mandate in recent years to truly address the educational needs of public school students.

E. Carlton Bowyer, superintendent of schools, made this assessment at a recent joint meeting of the School Board and administrators and City Council.

He said that the city's schools plan to complete their change to a middle school system in 1992.

George McGovern, director of middle schools, said that six years ago the Committee on Excellence in Education termed the middle grades — six, seven and eight — a vast education wasteland. The students in these grades, it was determined, need a special type of teaching and programs. One of the goals in the middle school is to reduce the drop-out rate, which may come in the high school grades, but has its start much earlier.

Under the program, grade six will be moved out of the elementary schools, into a middle school, with grades seven and eight. The ninth grade will be added to high schools which will then become comprehensive high schools.

In the middle schools, students will be divided into groups of 100 to 125 with four teachers in the basic curriculum — language arts, math, science and social studies. Although they will change classes it will be in a small area, eliminating much of the between classes hallway chaos.

McGovern said the middle school will not have the traditional bell system, but the program will be more flexible with a team teaching philosophy and sessions longer or shorter depending on the circumstances.

Pointing to the need for students to complete their education, McGovern said that only three million of the 27 million new jobs created between 1972 and 1986 require a basic level of entry. Only one in six jobs created in Virginia could be filled by high school drop-outs, he said.

Traditional junior high school programs, said McGovern, pay little attention to the emotional and physical needs of students. The object of the middle school is to build success in the 10-to 14-year old students. The status quo, said McGovern, means mediocrity.

The major thrust will be changing the instruction strategy, McGovern said, and a major job is the retraining of 1000 key teachers. Training will be provided both in-house and by consultants.

Councilwoman Reba McClanahan said that some school systems have put a lot of additional money in similar programs, such as extending the school day and adding enhancements. She wanted to know whether additional costs would be involved.

McGovern said that the same number of teachers will be used and not a tremendous amount of renovation will be required. He said that 13 ad hoc committees are working on curriculum development, but that this would be done anyway.

He also said that electives will be an integral part of the process and most electives will be available to students than are available now.

Councilman William D. Session, Jr., also asked about the possible cost, especially if high schools needed to be bigger to accommodate the ninth grade. McGovern said that high schools will still be built with a 2,000-student capacity, and that a middle school is cheaper to build than a junior high, but not by much.

McClanahan continued that she did not see how the system will work without spending more money.

Bowyer said that Kellam and Cox already have the ninth grade, and that in the next three years high schools will be losing population.

Tom Garrou, the school systems demographer, elaborated. He said that the school population increased by 2,300 last year, but the increase was less than 1,400 this year. He said that next year, the schools expect to see another 1,200 to 1,300 increase with the senior high schools stable or declining.

The State Board of Education in 1988 handed down its five-phase for grades, six, seven and eight, acting on a concern expressed by the Governor's Commission of Education in 1986 about grades six through eight.

Commentary

Labor Day Review Commission Chairman E.E. Brickell at a recent hearing.

Labor Day Ink Won't Go Away

Last week, it was reported that a Labor Day observer was found guilty in General District Court of assaulting a police officer over the holiday weekend.

How this incident and verdict will be used publicly and politically is unclear. But the conviction certainly bolsters the City of Virginia Beach's and Police Chief Charles Wall's contention that the city and its officers were, in fact, facing far more danger from the crowd than the crowd was facing from the police.

This issue will never be resolved to all parties' satisfaction. There are too many emotions and civic and political careers in the spotlight, and everyone will undoubtedly give their best performance. Next spring and summer, the Virginia Beach oceanfront community, and perhaps the rest of the city, will once again feel the glare of national television cameras, and experience the whipping tongue of civic rights reporters working their way up the journalistic ladder.

This story is not going away. Answers to the problems will be elusive. The public introspection process through which the city is now going, will be painful. And, the main reason there are calls to televise future commission meetings is so the public can hear all the accusations and innuendos that do not get into the regular media. This issue is too big and too interesting not to share with the entire community.

Commissioner G. William Whitehurst questions Joe Buchanan, one of those charged with preparing for last Labor Day.

The Virginia Beach Sun will be more than happy to run verbatim transcripts of all commission meetings, past, present and future. We'll see what happens.

Now That The Election Is Over, . . .

Well the latest election is over and what do we have?

First, Commonwealth's Attorney Paul Sciortino was forced from the primary by unpleasant disclosures, courtesy of a Norfolk court and Norfolk newspapers. Therefore, a spirited race ensued between Andre Evans, from whom Sciortino won his job, and Robert Humphreys, who used to work for Sciortino. Humphreys won.

Frank Drew, a Virginia Beach policeman for years, will be the new sheriff. Drew was generally well known, personable, and from what we know, very involved with the past Labor Day weekend. What bearing that had on his winning is hard to say, but apparently, it didn't hurt.

Quit Smoking

Unfortunately there are an estimated 50 million smokers in the United States. Most likely, more than half of them are trying to, or would like to kick the habit. But many Virginia Beach residents find it difficult.

Not only is cigarette smoking bad for your health, it gives you bad breath, yellow fingernails and an everlasting tobacco smell. Cigarette smokers know how hard it is to get the smoke smell out of clothing and a house.

There are many ways for smokers to quit. Some try hypnosis, some quit cold turkey, some take pills that are supposed to decrease the desire for nicotine, some hide their cigarettes. Probably the easiest way is to gradually cut down on cigarette intake.

Each year, the American Cancer Society holds a Great American Smokeout. This Nov. 16 could be a lucky day for smokers. The Great American Smokeout is an upbeat, good-natured effort to encourage smokers to give up cigarettes for 24 hours. All smokers, whether they are trying to quit or not, should take part in the smokeout. Just think of how clean the air will be on that particular day!

Suggestions and tips on how to quit smoking can be obtained the day of the smokeout by calling the American Cancer Society's toll free number, 1-800-ACS-2345. Trained volunteers will be on hand from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. to provide advice on how to leave the pack behind.

Special activities are also planned for the big day. Information on local events can be obtained by calling the American Cancer Society offices listed in the telephone book.

Whether you've been smoking for 50 years, one day or a week, take part in the smokeout. It could be the first step to a healthier life. — K.L.D.

Lee Cahill's City Council Report

A special study committee established by the 1989 General Assembly has recommended modifications that would have the net effect of reducing property tax revenues available to localities.

• The General Assembly will be requested to raise the per capita pupil allocation for 1990/91 to the amount recommended by the State Board of Education reflecting the actual cost of the Standards of Quality. The assembly also will be requested to fully fund all newly-mandated programs and to share in the cost of public school capital improvement accredited by the Standards of Quality.

• Council has delayed proposals on transportation funding until it reviews proposals of the Southeastern Virginia Planning District Commission (SEVPDC) on transportation financing strategies. Among the strategies are additional taxes such as the transfer tax and regional gas tax.

Councilwoman Barbara Henley said that the thing that bothers her about the SEVPDC report is that although all these combined taxes would not generate enough revenues to meet highway needs, the city would be giving away its options for raising money for other needs. She said that the city has held back on deal fees, and that she would hate for Council to give away taxing options for which the city has tried hard in the past to win State enabling legislation. She said it would be better to preserve what options the city has for future needs. "There's a limit to what the public will bear."

City Manager Aubrey V. Watts Jr. said that it was important for the communities to get the interstate law reenacted for maintenance of interstates. Even though Virginia is a request for an increase of $6 in the court fees which would be used for capital costs for court house renovation, maintenance and staffing. This has been in the city's legislative package for three years.

Watts also said that he had not received a formal request from the Commission to broadcast the hearings.

Councilman Robert E. Fentress questioned starting something new in the middle of the hearings, but Baum said that there was no reason to repeat a mistake by continuing it.

Baum said he was also "thinking of us because we need to make the decisions."

Our City's Public Servants — 5,000 Strong

The Mayor's Report

Virginia Beach Mayor
The Honorable
Meyera Oberndorf

On a daily basis, I become more impressed with the high quality and dedication of our city staff, now numbering over 5,000 strong. This number is exclusive of the School Board staff, an additional 7,500-plus fine public servants who are guiding our children into the 21st century.

Each day, as I live and work in Virginia Beach, I try to pause and recognize the contributions of the thousands of nameless faces that keep our city strong — the police officers and firefighters who protect our streets and homes, the engineers who keep our traffic moving, the social workers who help families in crisis, and the groundskeepers who keep our public facilities beautiful, to name just a few.

I hope that you can share my pride as well in our city organization, which maintains a state-of-the-art personnel system, focusing always on fiscal responsibility to our citizens.

You know, to keep our 390,000-plus citizens supplied with city services involves a herculean effort. Each year, the Department of Personnel processes over 12,000 employment applications, from all across the nation, in order to hire the most highly qualified employees. New programs are also continuously being developed to train and prepare our employees to meet the challenge of keeping our fast growing city working effectively and efficiently.

We are proud of our workforce, and hope that you share our pride, and perhaps you would like to join us.

In recent years, in addition to offering the traditional salary and benefits package, the city has added new programs designed to enhance the total well being of employees and the families, for example, the Wellness Program and the Employee Assistance Program. Such programs will reduce costs to citizens by maintaining a healthier and more productive workforce, as well as enhancing the quality of life for our valued employees, who are, after all, also our citizens.

We are proud of our workforce, and hope that you share our pride, and perhaps you would like to join us. The Department of Personnel maintains a "Jobs Hotline" which is available 24-hours-a-day at 427-4156. Call this number at your convenience to hear a recorded listing of the current city job vacancies. The list is also shown daily on TV Cable Channel 29. In addition, the city has many positions for citizens interested in volunteerism their

Community Tells School Board To Move Forward

The VBEA Report

By Clair Polley,
President of the Virginia
Beach Education Association

The Virginia Beach voters gave the school division a virtual mandate to begin solving the problem of overcrowded schools with the 72.3 percent passage of the bond referendum.

Though many of the people at the School Board offices were pleasantly surprised as the vote totals began coming in, they really shouldn't have been. The passage of this bond referendum was truly a community effort. Many PTAs took on the passage of the referendum as their early fall project and made every effort to inform their neighbors as well as get people to the polls to vote. Virginia Beach parents, community leaders, and concerned citizens agreed to do the best for children.

What the taxpayers will get for their money will be at least four new schools and site purchases for other schools. There will be an elementary school constructed in the London Bridge area to relieve overcrowding at Birdneck, North Landing, and Princess Anne Elementary. An elementary school will be constructed in the Farmer's Market/Green Run area to relieve Green Run, Salem and Rosemont Elementary Schools. Another middle school or junior high will be constructed in the Farmer's Market/Green Run area to accommodate the growth in this area. There will be another high school built in the West Kempville area because of the tremendous growth in that area and because of the ninth graders being assigned to high schools after the reconfiguration to "middle schools."

Along with the new construction, will be the purchase of sites for future buildings. The school division must begin now to look for new school sites before the land becomes more expensive and there is no land left large enough to accommodate a school complex.

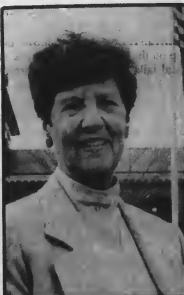

Gymnasiums will be added to those schools built before 1976 when gyms were not required. This will give the children in these schools the same access to quality physical education programs as students in the other schools with gymnasiums.

Bayside and Kellam High Schools will be modernized. Both these buildings are over 25 years old and need to be modernized so they can be used for another 25 years.

200 Years Ago, First State Adopted The Bill Of Rights

By Lillian Youell,
Virginia Beach Constitution
Celebration Commission
Consultant

Last Thursday, Nov. 9, the Constitution's Celebration Commission met to commemorate the bicentennial of the first steps toward ratification of the Bill of Rights.

Mary S. Bruner, chairman of the commission, also discussed plans to observe yet another 200th anniversary — the first meeting of the United States Supreme Court on Feb. 2, 1790. It is anticipated that ground will be broken for the city's new judicial center on that significant date in 1990 or soon thereafter.

Two hundred years ago, our leaders were debating the addition of the Bill of Rights to the Constitution. The omission of such had been one of the major obstacles during the debate over ratification of the Constitution. George Mason refused to sign the document in 1787 because it lacked this safeguard.

However, soon after the Constitution went into effect in 1789, Representative James Madison kept his promise to introduce a bill of rights. The debates, both written and oral, over the ratification of the Constitution and later the Bill of Rights made the citizens aware of the basic nature of their new government.

George Washington observed, "Upon the whole, I doubt whether the opposition to the Constitution will not ultimately be productive of more good than evil; it has called forth, in its defence (sic), abilities which would not perhaps have been otherwise exerted, they have thrown new light upon the science of government; they have given the rights of man a full and fair discussion, and explained them in so clear and forcible a manner as cannot fail to make a lasting impression."

Perhaps the fatal flaw of the Articles of Confederation, our first constitution, was the requirement that any alteration to the document be by unanimous vote of all states. Not a single change was ever made. Had the requirement for amendments been by two-thirds or three-fourths vote, those Articles might be our Constitution today.

George Mason pointed this out when he spoke on June 11, 1787, during the debates in the Constitutional Convention. "The plan now to be formed will certainly be defective, as the Confederation has been found on trial to be. Amendments therefore will be necessary, and it will be better to provide

City Deciding Where To Spend $8 Million Road Bond

City Council is still agonizing over whether and when and where to spend its special $8 million a year road bond authority.

Next Monday Council will face several options — to apply the $16 million from the 1988 and 1989 bond authority to Salem Road and the improvement of rural roads; to authorize the 1989 special road bonds (the 1988 bonds have already been authorized but not designated); to retain the ability of Council to utilize the funds in future years, or to not authorize the 1989 bonds and allow the authority to lapse on Dec. 31. The bonds will then no longer be available.

The subject came up during a recent workshop on the Capital Improvement Program when other topics discussed were the resort area sand project, bikeways, Atlantic Avenue drainage and Sandbridge Sewers.

Dean Block, assistant city manager/budget, pointed out that the Constitution Drive fly-over project resulted in the delay of other projects. Salem Road was delayed about three years. The $16 million available for the 1988 and 1989 special road bonds would provide $14 million to advance Salem Road to fund additional rural road projects. The state has agreed to reimburse the locality for the debt service.

Council was initially reluctant to use the special bonds because they had not been approved by referendum, but were authorized directly by the General Assembly. Voters later in a referendum approved using the bonds for road construction. A total of $64 million would be made available in eight years under the General Assembly authority.

Councilman William D. Sessions Jr. said he felt strongly that since the city has the bonds, it should move ahead. He said that anything for transportation would benefit the city. He also said that the city should take advantage of the state's willingness to handle the debt.

He also said that the rural roads need improvement.

Councilwoman Barbara Henley

said that she has heard extreme opposition to improving the rural roads. She said the people see improvement of the roads as an incentive to use. She said she would develop plans for improving roads until the comprehensive plan for the area is developed.

Councilwoman Reba McClanahan wanted to know what the impact on the city's debt service would be. Block said that the maximum debt service would not be felt until the fifth or sixth year when it would be approximately $1.6 million. After that the debt service will decline.

McClanahan said that the road started with two phases, but eventually it would have ten different phases. "While I support the concept that the road is needed, I don't want to delay any projects."

Block said there was no conflict on the State's sixth-year road schedule.

Councilman John A. Baum said he agreed with Henley up to a point, but that the city should acquire additional rights of way for rural roads now so that ditches could be moved over and shoulders could be widened. "To keep it hazardous to keep people from coming, I don't go along with that."

Councilman John D. Moss said that some project will end up with less money. He added that $1.6 million in one year is a lot of money. "We need to make a decision based on good financial analysis."

City Attorney Les Lilley said that the city's bond counsel informed him that for approval of the special bond authority a simple majority (six votes) is needed. On other bond issues, a two-thirds majority is required.

Mayor Meyera Oberndorf directed the staff to draft ordinances for all options.

Council also decided by consensus to allow $1.13 million in Resort Area sand replenishment funds to maintain where it is.

Block presented options to use the funds for economic development investments, and replenishment for other beach areas, or storm water projects. He said that no other beach area so far has met the criteria to qualify for the money.

Councilman Harold Heischobor pointed out that the city has the flexibility to move the funds to another project later.

Although Sandbridge has almost 200 septic tank failures, Virginia Beach Health Director George Sjolund said, septic tank permits are issued so long as the property meets State criteria. The permits are issued in Sandbridge the way they are issued anywhere else in the city, he said.

At the same time, the Health Department had placed the Sandbridge area high on its list of health hazards.

Henley saw some incongruity in the system. She said that the Health Department approved 404 septic tanks and now it is saying the area needs sewers. "Why did you approve the septic tanks?"

Sjolund said that the septic tanks are not the way for any high density subdivision to go, but permits are issued if the lots meet the regulations. On small lots, he said, septic tanks are harder to repair.

Utilities Director Clarence Warnstaff said that in establishing a schedule for water and sewer installation, the city also considers the cost. Some of the projects which have been placed on the second five years of the ten-year proposed Capital Budget, exceed $20,000 a lot. "We try to get the best value for the dollars by extending utilities into neighborhoods where the cost is less. The city now averages a 12,000 a lot cost for sewers. "We got the most bang for the buck," he said.

Henley also asked whether storm sewers would damage the sewer lines in Sandbridge.

Warnstaff said that the type storms the Beach has experienced would not damage the sewer lines, but more severe storms would damage both public and private investments.

Under a bad storm, like Hugo, Warnstaff said, the whole island would be eliminated.

Striders Hold Turkey Trot

The Tidewater Striders will hold its 12th annual Burger King Turkey Trot on Thursday, Nov. 23 beginning at 7 a.m. at Mt. Trashmore.

The Striders have added a 10-kilometer racewalk to kickoff the Thanksgiving morning series of healthful events. The race begins at 7:45 a.m.

At 9:30 a.m., the one-mile health walk and one-mile run will begin. The featured 10K run begins at 10 a.m.

All participants and volunteers will receive a Turkey t-shirt with 3M reflective ink for safer morning and night walking and running. They will also be eligible for merchandise giveaways.

Entry forms are available at most athletic stores, YMCAs and all area Burger King restaurants.

Proceeds will benefit the Special Olympics, the United Negro Fund and the Tidewater Striders Scholarship Fund.

Bingo Night For Handicapped

A bingo night for physically and mentally handicapped people will be held Saturday, Dec. 2, from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Kempsville Recreation Center, room 117, 800 Monmouth Lane.

The bingo night will be sponsored by the Pembroke Kiwanis Club, the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation, and CLASP (Citizens Loving All Special People).

Participation is free and is only open to physically and mentally handicapped people. Refreshments will be served and many bingo prizes will be given. Parents and guardians are welcome, however, chaperones are present at all times.

Transportation is available through TRT at $5 per roundtrip per individual. Call Carolyn Wismer at 545-8041 after 7 p.m. weekdays or anytime weekends.

For further information call Harry Baird at 486-3110.

Pesticide Permit Workshop Set

Virginia Beach holders of private and commercial pesticide applicator permits with 1989 or 1990 expiration dates may recertify at workshops being held Dec. 12 and Dec. 14.

The workshops will be conducted by the Virginia Beach Agriculture Department at the Virginia Tech Hampton Roads Center in Pembroke Office Park.

These free workshops will be of interest to farmers, turf and landscape managers, pest control operators and others who use restricted-use pesticides. Private applicators may attend either date; commercial applicators must attend both sessions to be recertified.

Pre-registration by Dec. 8 is required. To preregister, phone the Virginia Beach Extension Office, 427-4769.

Christmas House Tour Slated

The Cape Henry Woman's Club will present its 27th annual "Christmas in the Country" house tour Tuesday, Dec. 5 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Neal Kellum, known as Lower Wolf-snare, of Pallet's Landing, circa 1715, is located at 513 West Plantation Road. Restoration is complete, down to the authentic hand carved shingles made by Mrs. Kellum.

Cider and fresh baked goods will be served in the "keeping room." Crafts and baked goods will be sold in the country store and bake shop. The Madrigal Singers from Independence Junior High will provide entertainment during the candlelight hours.

A donation of $2 will be used for charitable causes.

For more information call 481-7220.

Stepfamily Association Meets

"What's There to be Thankful for in a Stepfamily?" will be the topic for discussion at the next monthly meeting of Tidewater Stepfamilies, Stepfamily Association of America, Inc. The meeting is scheduled for Monday, Nov. 20 at 7:30 p.m. in the Life Savings Bank Community Room, 1756 Laskin Road, in Hill-top. The Community Room is located behind the bank.

The charge is $3 donation per person.

These little boys had fun at Recycle Saturday.

Two Tons Of Recyclables Collected At Recycle Saturday

"Recycle Saturday," the first regional recycling effort in the Hampton Roads area, was a major success based on reports of the total amount of items recycled.

More than 40 tons of recyclable material was collected, including aluminum, glass, plastics and newspaper. This represents the largest amount of recyclable material ever collected in a single day in Hampton Roads.

The event was sponsored by the Hampton Roads Municipal Communications, Beautification/Clean Community Programs and a Norfolk television station. Recycling sites were set up in Chesapeake, Hampton, James City County, Newport News, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Suffolk, Virginia Beach and York County.

Recycle Saturday originated as an effort to boost public awareness of recycling and its impact on the environment.

Beach Couple Donates $300,000 To Old Dominion University

Old Dominion University President William B. Spang Jr. recently announced the largest scholarship gift in the history of Old Dominion University.

Theodore F. and Constance C. Constant of Ocean Shore Avenue are establishing a $300,000 endowment to attract outstanding students in Hampton Roads to Old Dominion.

The Constants' gift will provide endowment support for 12 of the university's 20 Dominion Scholars awards. The 12 recipients will be called "Theodore F. and Constance C. Constant Dominion Scholars" and will be restricted to Virginia students, with preferences to graduates of Hampton Roads high schools.

The Dominion Scholars Program requires as a minimum that applicants have an SAT score of 1,200 or higher, be in the upper 10 percent of their class, have a grade point average of 3.25 or better, and demonstrate leadership skills and activities. The scholarships are renewable for three years so long as the student is full time and maintains a GPA of at least 3.0.

In addition to the Dominion Scholar endowment, the Constants established a $100,000 endowment for two fellowships in the College of Business and Public Administration in 1982 and have been generous annual donors to the university's athletic scholarship program.

The first three Theodore F. and Constance C. Constant Dominion Scholars will be selected in the freshman class entering the fall of 1990, with three additional Constant Dominion Scholars being selected each of the three succeeding years.

For more information contact Dr. Dana D. Burnett, vice president for Student Services, at 683-3442.

$2,000,000 Donated To VWC

Virginia Wesleyan College received gifts and contributions totaling more than $2,000,000 during the last fiscal year, according to a report mailed to more than 1,500 donors this month.

There were 1,504 individuals, corporations, foundations, church and civic groups who contributed $2,021,942 for all purposes during the fiscal year July 1, 1988 through June 30, 1989. Last year's total was $1,722,677.

The largest amount received, $621,516, came from 429 non-alumni and nonparent individuals.

Alumni and parents contributed $147,511. Almost 200 corporations contributed $352,781 and 20 foundations made grants totalling $401,870. Virginia Wesleyan received $207,819 as its portion from the Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges and $227,399 from the Virginia Conference of The United Methodist Church. Thirteen civic groups, including the Women of Wesleyan, contributed $63,046.

Virginia Wesleyan, with an enrollment of 1,280 students, is in its 24th academic session.

WOW Hold Fashion Show

The Women of Wesleyan's Annual Fashion Show will be held Thursday, Nov. 16 at 11 a.m. in the Virginia Wesleyan College gymnasium.

Tickets are $6 and will be available at the door. For further information or advance tickets, call the alumni office at 455-3287. Proceeds will go toward projects for the college.

The show will feature fall and holiday fashions, with commentary by Nancy Creech. The light luncheon will be a buffet of finger foods.

The Women of Wesleyan, a 22-year-old organization of Hampton Roads women, has been assisting Virginia Wesleyan since its first year of operation. This support group has raised approximately $85,000 for the college. In addition to a scholarship fund, club projects have provided funds for a greenhouse, library books, picnic tables, new lounge furniture, a piano, landscaping and more. Projects this year include the fashion show, a flea market and cookbook sales.

CBNU Holds College Fair

CBNU University will host a Christian college fair on Thursday, Nov. 16 from 7 to 9 p.m. in the CBNU Library Atrium.

Area Violinist Performs At Center For The Arts

Violinist Lawrence Mednick will give a recital of classical and contemporary music on Tuesday, Nov. 28 at the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts.

The concert, held in the Price Auditorium at 8 p.m., is the first of several upcoming performing arts programs at the Center. A public reception follows the recital.

Included are sonatas by Handel and Brahms; works by Claude Debussy, celebrating the 1989 bicentennial of the French Revolution; and suites by American composers Robert Russell Bennett and John Duffy.

American composer John Duffy — whose musical scores have been described as memorable, haunting and brilliant — is internationally acclaimed. His Heritage Symphonic Dances have been arranged for violin and piano for this event by nationally renowned conductor Richard Williams. Mednick will play several portions: Rabbi's Dance; Renaissance Dance, (evoking the ambience of Venice in 1550); and Spanish Dance, (with a joyous flamenco flavor).

This recital is the premiere of the arranged Heritage Symphonic Dances. Duffy's Symphony #1 will be premiered the following evening at New York City's Lincoln Center.

The suite Hexapoda, by Robert Russell Bennett, includes 1940s-style pieces with whimsical titles such as Gut Bucket Gus, Jane Shakes Her Hair, and Jim Jives.

Mednick, a sculptor, businessman and active in public service, began his musical career at age 10. He has been a member of the critically acclaimed Feldman String Quartet, based in Hampton Roads and traveling throughout Virginia and other states.

Critics have described his playing as "beautifully eloquent, sanely balanced... deft and discreet... outstanding fiddling." Joining Mednick as accompanying pianist on Nov. 28 will be Lee Jordan-Anders, a well-known teacher and performer in the United States and Europe. Jordan-Anders directs the "Familiar Faces" concert series at Virginia Wesleyan College.

Admission is $4 for Center members, $8 for nonmembers, payable the evening of the recital. Mednick will donate a portion of the concert fees in support of Center activities.

The Virginia Beach Center for the Arts is located at 22nd Street and Park Avenue, opposite the Pavilion Convention Center, at the foot of the west-bound entrance to Route 44. Telephone the Center for the Arts at 425-0000 for further information.

Dance Workshop Held At V.B. Center For The Arts

The Virginia Beach Center for the Arts will present a dance/performance workshop — "Creating Time-Based Art" — on Saturday, Dec. 9 from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. by visiting artist Cathy Paine.

It is free and open to the public. Paine is a dancer, choreographer, and director of Mixed Media, a dance/performance ensemble in Richmond. She is also a lecturer in the department of dance and dramatic arts at Mary Washington College in Fredericksburg. Paine's workshop at the Center focuses on "art" that cannot be exhibited, recorded or collected; art that breaks the rules and creates innovative concepts.

By incorporating many disciplines (such as dance, music, art and dramatics) into one activity, Paine creates a performance unlike those of traditional dance. Loosely defined as "performance art" in recent years, this type of multi-media event may involve musicians, painters, dancers, sculptors and singers, in an exhibition of sight, sound and experience, Paine says.

In the workshop, the participants become the performers. Beginning with warm-up exercises and improvisations, they'll combine movement, vocalization and simple props. Paine will demonstrate and explain the importance of using these techniques in a setting influenced by space and time.

Held in the Center's Price Auditorium, the workshop will break into small groups, encouraging both individual and group interaction. Participants (high school age and older) require no experience and should wear comfortable, active-wear clothing.

Paine received her master's degree in dance from the University of California at Los Angeles in 1977 and has been performing internationally since 1977. She has performed in the Terrace Theatre at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. and served as guest artist at many colleges and art centers, including the Hong Kong Academy for the Performing Arts.

Her extensive teaching experience includes work at the University of Montana, Ohio University, the University of Maryland and Meredith College in Raleigh, N.C.

"Creating Time-Based Art" is one of a series of workshops that travel statewide under the direction of the affiliate department of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts. It is organized by the Museum and funded in part by the Jean Stafford Camp Memorial Fund.

Advance registration is required. There is a nonrefundable $5 registration fee. The Center for the Arts is located at 22nd Street and Park Avenue, across from the Pavilion Convention Center, at the foot of the west-bound entrance to Route 44. Telephone the Center at 425-0000 for information.

Henderson Performs At Pavilion

Skitch Henderson, principal Pops conductor of The Virginia Symphony Pops, will conduct an evening of George Gershwin music Sunday, Nov. 19 at 3 p.m. at the Pavilion Convention Center.

Featured on the program is internationally-acclaimed pianist Susan Starr who was the 1962 Silver medalist in the Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow. Starr will play Gershwin's Concerto in F. Other selections are from an American in Paris, Gershwin on Broadway and Cuban Overture.

Henderson, who is founder of the New York Pops, conducts sold out concerts in Carnegie Hall each season. This is his fourth season bringing light-classical programming to Hampton Roads with The Virginia Symphony Pops.

Tickets are $6 to $25 and are available by calling 623-2310 (Southside) or 380-0040 (Peninsula).

Orchestra Holds French Fest

The Virginia Beach Community Orchestra will present a concert as part of the Tidewater French Festival on Tuesday, Nov. 28 at 8 p.m. in the sanctuary of the Virginia Beach United Methodist Church.

The program will include two major works by French composers. Dr. Carl Gilmer, organist, will join the orchestra for a performance of Saint-Saens' Symphony No. 3, Op. 78 (Organ Symphony). Gilmer will perform on the church's 50-rank Cassavant pipe organ. The Virginia Symphonic Chorus will join the orchestra for Arthur Honegger's dramatic symphonic psalm, King David.

Also included in the performance will be Narrator J. Scottie Griffin and Shirley Hurd as the "Witch of Endor."

Labyak Plays Longwood Tennis

Lauri Labyak, daughter of Captain and Mrs. Peter Labyak, and a senior at Longwood College, was a member of the Longwood Lady Lancer Netters, the school's women's tennis team.

Labyak had competed since her freshman year and was one of the tri-captains for the fall session.

Virginia Beach Girl Scouts "Explore The Past"

A Brownie takes a turn at the "climbing bear" game, while in the background several troops are involved in a "drop the handkerchief" tag game.

Francis Land House docent Glenda Knowles explains the importance and uses of herbs in the 18th century.

Colonial Coast Girl Scout Council leaders and their troops participate in a word game.

Local musician Paul Ditroia involves a Brownie troop in an old-fashioned sing-a-long.

Anna Gay of the Tidewater Weavers' Guild demonstrates the method of extracting a dye from boiled marigolds.

Richard Anne Ankary of Virginia Beach, Easter Seal volunteers, worked all day making cotton candy and snow-cones for the crowds.

The Peanut Hunt game was a real challenge for the younger children.

Geoffrey was on hand for all the excitement. Toys "R" Us donated the grand prize - a sparkling new bicycle.

A father and son ran side-by-side in the One Mile Family Fun Run that kicked off the special day.

The Moonwalk ride was the popular attraction for most kids.

Superfest Raises $3,000 For Easter Seal Society

The second Annual Super Club Superfest recently raised over $3,000 for the Easter Seal Society of Virginia. Superfest, a children's carnival of games and fitness challenges, was sponsored by Sentara Leigh Hospital, Super Club Fitness Center For Children and Z-104.

Over 600 people came out for the fun and participated in Superfest. The funds generated by this annual children's event will go to benefit the many programs and services Easter Seal provides for disabled children and adults in the community.

Record-Breaking Crowd Attends VWC Homecoming

VWC President Lambuth Clarke welcomes guests to Parents Family Homecoming Weekend '89.

Cheerleaders and VWC Martin lead an enthusiastic homecoming crowd who saw the Martins defeat Washington and Lee.

VWC Homecoming queen Dina Porter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Porter, was nominated by her sorority Alpha Sigma Alpha. She was selected from a field of 24 nominees.

Virginia Wesleyan College's Parents/Family Homecoming Weekend '89 events included a dinner cruise on the New Spirit, a soccer game, a student art show, an alumni tailgate party, a buffet luncheon, presentation of an alumni award and crowning of the 1989 homecoming queen. The weekend events attracted record-breaking crowds.

for them, in an easy, regular and Constitutional way than to trust to chance and violence." Even with the addition of the amending clause, however, Mason declined to support the Constitution as it still lacked a bill of rights.

If the delegates to the Philadelphia Convention in 1787 had learned anything from the failure of the Articles of Confederation, it was inadvisable to require a unanimous vote for any alteration. This deficiency was corrected with Article V of the Constitution, which requires that an amendment be ratified by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the several States, or by Conventions in three-fourths thereof. By 1791, there were 14 states, as Vermont had joined the Union on March 4 of that year. Thus, ratification of the Bill of Rights required approval of 11 states.

On Sept. 25, 1789, Congress had approved 12 articles, which were submitted to the states for ratification or rejection. These proposed amendments were officially sent to the states by Thomas Jefferson, then serving as Secretary of State.

Within two months, on Nov. 20, 1789, New Jersey became the first state to ratify 10 of the 12 proposed amendments. That state approved Articles III-XII, which later became Articles I-X. So you see, our famous First Amendment had originally been proposed as the Third Amendment.

Few Virginia Beach residents are aware of those first two articles that were proposed but never ratified. In the light of history, consider the amendment proposed as Article I and be grateful for our forefathers' foresight in rejecting it.

"After the first enumeration required by the first article of the Constitution, there shall be one Representative for every 30,000 until the number shall amount to 100 after which the proportion shall be so regulated by Congress, that there shall be not less than 100 Representatives, nor less than one Representative for every 40,000 persons, until the number of Representatives shall amount to 200; after which the proportion shall be so regulated by Congress, that there shall not be less than 200 Representatives, nor more than one Representative for every 50,000 persons."

One other bicentennial event this month should be noted. As a result of congressional action to amend the Constitution, our neighbor to the south, North Carolina, finally ratified the Constitution on Nov. 21, 1789. By a vote of 194 to 77, North Carolina joined the Union. During December 1789, both Maryland and North Carolina ratified the 10 amendments.

It would be two more years before Virginia ratified the Bill of Rights on Dec. 15, 1791 becoming the key 11th state to do so, making those first 10 articles an integral part of the Constitution.

Years later, Thomas Jefferson, in a letter, dated July 12, 1816, to Samuel Kercheval, observed, "Some men look at constitutions with sanctimonious reverence, and deem them like the ark of the covenant, too sacred to be touched. They ascribe to the men of the preceding age a wisdom more than human, and suppose what they did to be beyond amendment. . . I am certainly not an advocate for frequent and untried changes in laws and constitutions. . . But . . . laws and institutions must go hand in hand with progress of the human mind."

hind our schools will be driving off into the sunset in a couple of years? Unfortunately, no. The current bond referendum is only about half of what the school system really needs. Unless we build a wall around Virginia Beach and lock the gates, another four or more school buildings will be needed in 1992. The community will again have to decide to do what is best for our children.

In Sandbridge, Warnstaff said, the sanitary sewer lines would be deeper than the water lines which are there now. The project would have five to six pump stations.

A class five hurricane, said City Manager Aubrey V. Watts Jr. would do incredible damage anywhere in the city.

McClanahan complained that on bikeways there has been "no action, no action, and talk, talk, talk." She said that the city still needs bikeways that connect.

Block said that there have been no financial changes in priorities.

Baum said that the bicycle riders are increasing in the country and take up as much room as cars.

Henley said that in areas where the city has bike paths, "we still see riders using the roads. . . Many people fear they're going to hit a bike rider."

Councilman Albert Balko said that the people want a bikeway connection between Bayville Farms and Great Neck Park. But they don't want a bikeway across Great Neck Road.

Oberndorf said that a drainage problem exists on 55th Street.

Public Works Director Oral Lambert said that the street is included in the $9 million North Beach drainage project designed for a five year storm.

McClanahan said that "we're using five- and ten-year storms, but most of our storms seem to be 100-year storms. Have we really accomplished anything?"

Lambert said that a drainage project which would handle a 100-year storm is no economically feasible. The difference in design for a five or ten year storm and 100-year storm is in the time it would take for the water to drain from the street. He said that even with a 100-year storm, the water would not only collect in the gutters and would not flood homes. The project being constructed would drain the water out, but more slowly, while construction for a 100-year storm would move the water out as fast as it comes in.

Great American Smokeout Set For Nov. 16

Each year the American Cancer Society is urging Virginia Beach smokers to give up the habit for 24 hours during the Great American Smokeout on Thursday, Nov. 16.

This year, Virginia Beach General Hospital joins the American Cancer Society, the American Lung Association and the City of Virginia Beach to celebrate the "Smokeout" with a symbolic bonfire on the hospital grounds.

This year, the hospital has taken a different angle on this event by asking that everyone give up their own personal crutch for a day whether it be cigarettes, chocolate, salt, over consumption of food in general, or their couch potato behavior.

On Wednesday, Nov. 15 from 2:30 to 5 p.m. employees, volunteers, auxiliaries and community members will join together to help send their crutches up in smoke. Entertainer Ken Hicks will emcee the event and help participants chuckle at their not-so-healthy crutches.

Participants will be eligible to win a free Smoke Stoppers Class, Leaner Weigh Class, Hearsch Check Evaluation, or a month of exercise classes through the Stretch and Tone Exercise Program. For more information, call 481-8141.

Red Cross Offers Lamaze/Parenthood Class

The Tidewater Chapter of American Red Cross will offer a series of Preparation for Parenthood/Lamaze classes for couples expecting in mid-March to mid-May, 1990.

The three-hour classes will be held 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturdays for eight weeks, beginning Jan. 27 until March 17. The class series will be held in the Bayside area.

Participants will learn anatomy and physiology, pre-natal care, nutrition, labor and delivery using the Lamaze method, and infant care including feeding, diapering, bathing and parenting tips.

A registration fee is charged; gift packages are provided to all participants.

For more information, call the Health and Safety Services department at the Tidewater Chapter, 446-7779. Space is limited.

Beach General Holds Stroke Support Group

Virginia Beach General Hospital will hold a stroke support group meeting for stroke patients and their families on Wednesday, Nov. 15 at 12:30 p.m. in the hospital's conference room.

Meetings feature guest speakers and discussions. The hospital's rehabilitation team will serve as a resource group to answer questions and provide support.

The hospital will offer free blood pressure and diabetes screenings on Wednesday, Nov. 15 from 6 to 7:30 p.m., and Tuesday, Nov.

21 from 1 to 3 p.m. in the hospital's main lobby.

Participants will receive information about hypertension and diabetes as well as a record card of their blood pressure and blood sugar readings.

Hospital Holds Diabetes Expo

Virginia Beach General Hospital will co-sponsor "Diabetes Expo '89" on Saturday, Nov. 18, from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at the Virginia Beach Omni Hotel.

Dr. Leon-Paul Georges, director of The Diabetes Institute of Eastern Virginia, will be the keynote speaker.

Pre-registration is required. The fee is $5 per person which includes lunch.

Commerce Club Meets

The Hampton Roads Foreign Commerce Club, an organization that promotes foreign trade through the Ports of Virginia, will hold its regular monthly meeting on Wednesday, Nov. 15 at the Holiday Inn - Waterside.

Guest speaker at the luncheon will be Philip H. Anns, chairman of the Virginia Export Council. He will provide club members with an update on the European economic community's progress toward achieving a single unified market by 1992.

Individuals and/or businesses interested in attending the meeting will meet Monday, Nov. 20 at Fogg's Seafood Restaurant at 415 Atlantic Avenue.

Mayor Proclaims Youth Appreciation Week

Virginia Beach Mayor Meyera E. Oberndorf proclaimed Nov. 5 through 11 Youth Appreciation Week. This observance is sponsored by Optimist Clubs throughout North America to bring about recognition of the positive actions and contributions of young people.

VRA Meets At Fogg's Restaurant

The Virginia Beach chapter of the Virginia Restaurant Association will meet Monday, Nov. 20 at Fogg's Seafood Restaurant at 415 Atlantic Avenue.

Kerry Sipe, public editor, The Virginian-Pilot, will be the guest speaker.

Social hour and dinner begin at 7 p.m. with the business meeting and speaker at 8 p.m.

Tickets are also available for the Christmas party to be held on Dec.

Hearing Copies: $1.75/Pg.

VBS Staff Report

If you're planning on buying verbatim transcriptions of the Virginia Beach's Labor Day Review Commission hearings, you'd better get your checkbook out.

Each transcribed page will sell for $1.75 a page, double spaced, about 25 lines to a page, according to the commission's free lance court reporter, Susie Rutledge.

As of late last week, Rutledge had only completely transcribed two of the hearings, which are being held at the Virginia Beach Pavilion. Six are scheduled. The first hearing lasted between four and five hours and generated 201 pages of copy, Rutledge said. A complete copy of the hearing will cost $351.75. The second hearing required 257 pages. That'll cost interested parties $449.75.

So far, Rutledge said, the following organizations have ordered copies: Penthouse magazine (it is interested primarily in the city manager's comments, Rutledge said), the city attorney's office, the Labor Day Review Commission, and the Beach.

Rutledge, a Chesapeake resident who lives in Great Bridge Gardens, also works for various local attorneys as a court reporter. She was asked by the commission to be its recorder, and has had to hire a helper to assist with the commission hearings, she said.

Rutledge said she hasn't been calculating the total number of hours required to transcribe the hearings but, "it was days and days, I know that," she said about one of the first hearings.

Rutledge said it will be several weeks after the final Nov. 28 hearing before all copies will be available to the public.

The 17-member commission was formed by Virginia Beach city officials to investigate clashes between students and police during the 1989 Labor Day weekend.

Adopt-A-Beach A Success

Mayor Meyera E. Oberndorf has announced the establishment of an Adopt-A-Beach program to complement the city's Adopt-A-Highway program.

Following the development of the pilot program for highways, Oberndorf requested that the staff of the City's Landscape Services Division research the feasibility of an Adopt-A-Beach program.

To date, 15 community groups have adopted sections of Virginia Beach roads, and have made a significant contribution to the cleanliness of the city's road system.

Community organizations and interested groups can now adopt a one mile stretch of Virginia Beach. Groups agree to sponsor a minimum of four cleanups of their mile of beach on designated days in April, June, September and October. By having all groups sponsor cleanups on the same day, the entire beach is cleaned at one time. The groups are also asked to participate in the city's fall dune grass planting program to help stabilize the dune system.

Adopt-A-Beach signs with the name of the sponsoring group will be erected on the adopted section of beach. The Landscape Services Division will supply trash bags and other supplies, and will pick up bags for disposal.

For additional information on the Adopt-A-Beach program, contact Janis Layden, Landscape Services Division at 427-4461.

Little Ones Enjoy Beach Playground

In planning for the 1989 Neptune Festival, Judy Wilder, recreation supervisor for the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation came up with the idea of creating a playground on the beach. She wrote to Little Tikes, Inc. of Hudson, Ohio, asking for a donation of playground equipment. Little Tikes, Inc. stipulated in the agreement that the toys be donated to a charity afterwards.

Virginia Beach Parks and Recreation workers delivered the toys to Hope Haven and the Samaritan House following the festival.

Those seated at the head of the table at the Holidays at the Beach press luncheon were: Henry Rutz, director of Virginia Beach Resorts Programs Office; Jim Ricketts, director of tourism; Flo McDaniel, executive director, Virginia Beach Hotel/Motel Association; Hester Waterfield, tourism specialist; Vicki Harvey, manager, Adam Thoroughgood House and the Chrysler Museum; and Frannie Whitney Nelson, founder/president of Hospice Care, Inc. Also, Mayor Meyera Oberndorf; Councilman Will Sessions; Nancy Creech, Nancy Moore, Resort Special Events coordinator; Vicki Foster, and Carol Hoppel, administrative assistant, Ocean Occasions.

Holidays At The Beach Announced Events

The Holidays at the Beach committee recently held a press luncheon at Fog's Restaurant to bring the public up to date on the Holiday at the Beach activities. Approximately 30 people attended the meeting.

The purpose of the Holidays at the Beach is to provide free family entertainment opportunities for the community to enjoy and to create a festive environment in the Virginia Beach resort area during the holidays.

The event was established by the Virginia Beach Convention Marketing Advisory Committee which was made up of representatives from the City of Virginia Beach and hotel and restaurant owners in the resort area.

The Holidays at the Beach committee is composed of representatives from the following organizations: The Chrysler Museum; City of Virginia Beach-Resort Programs Office; Hospice Care, Inc.; Neptune Festival/Ocean Occasions; Resort Retailers Association; Tidewater Regional Transit; Virginia Beach Hotel/Motel Association; and the Virginia Beach Restaurant Association.

The 1989 Holidays at the Beach calendar of events is as follows:

On Friday, Dec. 1 a Christmas Tree Lighting will be held at Beach Garden Park at 7 p.m. The lighting symbolizes the beginning of the City of Virginia Beach's holiday activities. The First Colonial High School Madrigals will sing Christmas songs and Mayor Meyera Oberndorf will light a live 12-foot Douglas fir tree to kick off the festivities.

The Adam Thoroughgood

House will tell the history and deliver the traditional Yule Log Ceremony. The house will present the city with a piece of "brand" to start the city's first "Yule Fire" in traditional colonial fashion.

Christmas caroling, fireworks and refreshments follow the ceremony.

Trolleys will provide free shuttle service from the Dome and Pavilion parking lots to the Beach Garden Park from 6:15 to 8:15 p.m.

An Oceanfront Holiday Parade will be held Saturday, Dec. 2 at 11 a.m., beginning at 16th Street and Pacific Avenue. Santa Claus, marching bands and clowns will be featured.

Also on Saturday, a Holidays at the Beach Celebration will be held at the Dome from

Cities Reluctant To Give Taxing Power To Authority

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

In both Chesapeake and Virginia Beach city officials appear to have no problem with tolls, but are reluctant to give up their taxing powers to a regional transportation authority.

Consultants hired by the Southeastern Virginia Planning District Commission (SEVPDC) and the Peninsula Planning District Commission have recommended the establishment of a Hampton Roads Regional Transportation Finance Authority.

Among the funding sources, the consultants included a regional gas tax, regional sales tax, impact fees, assessment/district fees, real estate transfer tax, local auto deal and local option income tax. Estimates are that all of these taxes would bring in only $155 million a year.

The region faces an annual shortfall through the year 2000 on non-interstate roads alone of approximately $150 million. The cost of bringing the intraregional highway system to acceptable levels over the same period comes to $3.6 billion or approximately $166 million a year in the region.

Of the $3.6 billion, John Hassel, a consultant with the firm of Linton, Mields, Reister and Cottone, of Washington, D.C., said that only $2 billion can be expected from federal, state and local governments under the current funding policies.

Therefore, he said, to meet all the needs, an intraregional toll program is essential.

SEVPDC's Dwight Farmer explained that if a one dollar toll were placed on all 20 intraregional systems, another $320 million a year would be raised. Of the 20 systems, at present only the Virginia Beach Expressway (Route 44) and the Jordan Bridge in Chesapeake have tolls, neither approaching the dollar figure.

Chesapeake Councilman Gary Markham said that there are only so many taxes possible and the city would be giving its taxing prerogatives to an authority.

Mayor David I. Wynne stated that he would not support turning over general taxation to an authority. "It should be up to the people. User fees (such as tolls) are (acceptable). We have a lot of other needs, like health needs, and we're going to need the extra money."

Hassel had said that it would take $350 to $400 million a year to maintain the interstate system in Virginia. If the federal government does not provide the money, Hassel said, the state would have to use money which otherwise could be used for new projects. Wynne said that he would like to see the backup figures. "I'm not sure you have good numbers on the need."

A day earlier, Virginia Beach Councilwoman Barbara Henley said that the thing that bothered her about the transportation report was that all the combined proposed taxes would not be sufficient to take care of the transportation problem needs.

"But if we gave away the tax (ability) we would be giving away what we can do. We've held back on the toll fee. I would hate for us to give away (the city's taxing authority). It would be better to reserve that for future needs. There's a limit to what the people will bear."

Virginia Beach Councilman John D. Moss said that he would want local option for the taxes and would not want to limit the use of any new tax revenues to transportation.

Moss also said that nothing could be accomplished unless land use was taken into consideration. He added, "I don't think Virginia Beach needs another layer of government... The general public is unaware of the fiscal impact."

Arthur Collins, executive director of the SEVPDC, said that there is nothing in the recommendation of an authority that connotes a regional government. It would be no more than the Southeastern Public Service Authority, the agency that handles solid waste disposal for southside jurisdictions. Participation would be entirely voluntary.

2,000 People Expected To Attend Frances Land House Faire

By Karen Delrymple
Staff Writer

The Friends of the Francis Land House are getting a head start on the Christmas holidays this year.

The fourth annual Christmas Craft Faire will be held at the Francis Land House Dec. 1 through 3. More than 1,000 people attended last year and helped the Friends raise over $1,500.

"We would hope for 2,000 (people), but you never know," said Johnnie Miller, chairman of the Friends of the Francis Land House and coordinator of the faire. She said the Friends are hoping to raise more than $2,000 this year.

All proceeds from the faire benefit the furnishings fund for the house.

The 18th century historic home will be decorated for the holidays for visitors to enjoy shopping in a "Colonial type" atmosphere. The faire will feature a silhouette artist, china painting, grapevine wreaths, country woodcraft, Christmas collectibles and candy houses and bobbin lace.

"It's a quality exhibit featuring the best in country crafts," Miller said.

The Friends will also provide home baked goods and cider will be for sale.

Admission to the faire is $1 and accompanied children under 12 will be admitted free.

Wanda Crabtree, corresponding secretary of the Friends of the Francis Land House, enjoys last year's craft faire.

"It's a quality exhibit featuring the best in country crafts," Miller said.

"Local craftsmen will be able to show and have wares for sale. This helps them and it helps us because it brings people through the house and makes them aware of the house and the things we plan to do," Miller said.

The Francis Land House is located at 3131 Virginia Beach Boulevard.

Serving Seniors

Thanksgiving is tomorrow and there are probably many people who have nowhere to go and nowhere to eat. Many of these people are senior citizens.

There is an organization that can help senior citizens find a hot meal, and not only on Thanksgiving. Every day of the week, the Southeastern Virginia Area-wide Model Program, Inc. (SEVAMP), provides seniors with a meal at the Seatack Community Center. For those seniors who are homebound, Meals-on-Wheels will come directly to your home and bring the meal to you.

There are probably many people who are not aware of SEVAMP's services. Seniors are an important part of the community and they deserve to be taken care of. The seniors who eat their meals at the senior center aren't just fed, but they can enjoy a wide array of activities, such as exercise programs, social events, arts and crafts and legal assistance. All these events are conducted with people their own age, so they also have the chance to enjoy each other's company.

For the less fortunate seniors who are confined to their homes, they may not have the opportunity to socialize at the senior center, but they can still enjoy a home cooked hot meal. Oftentimes, the delivered meal is their only contact with the outside world and the highlight of their day.

It's good to know that someone cares about the well being of the city's senior citizens. They should be given the opportunity to enjoy their "golden years" and not be pushed aside. — K.L.D.

Tourism's Future

There's not too much left to say about the Marshall's Hotel, which has closed after 50 years of business. It's gone. Even if the bulldozers haven't begun roaring, it's all over.

As reported in last week's issue, part-owner John C. Rogers is sorry to see the hotel's demise. He had visions of sitting back for a while, letting Marshall's prosper while he soaked up the sun. But, other interests and a slow tourist season, he said, were enough to force him on to other projects. As he looks toward the future for the city's resort borough, he's scared. "Petrified," is the exact word he used.

The Virginia Beach community, in general, does not understand the value of tourism to the city's overall economy, Rogers said. If Marshall's can close because of soft business, he said, so may other resort businesses. It must be noted, however, that Marshall's was not on the main strip and was out of walking distance for most of the city's tourists. But still, the regular clients that Marshall's needed to survive must have been declining in numbers. Virginia Beach will certainly survive without Marshall's. And Marshall's investors will more than likely survive this venture. But even though this is just one business that is failing out of many that are surviving, it should send a signal to the Virginia Beach business community that nothing goes on forever and that all things must change. Just look at what's happening with the Labor Day investigation. Who would have thought two years ago that the city would be embroiled in the controversy in which it now finds itself.

Virginia Beach has enjoyed unfettered success for more than a decade. How well we fare over the next decade will most likely be determined by decisions made over the next two to three years.

Holidays At Beach

There are so many places to go and things to do in Virginia Beach, especially for families. Well, the Holidays at the Beach committee has added yet another thing to the long list of things to do.

Holidays at the Beach has come up with a calendar of events for the Christmas season. The activities range from a tree lighting to a parade to a fun night of food, drinks and entertainment. These give the community a chance to meet, socialize and create a festive environment during the holiday season. Beach residents should take advantage of the opportunity to enjoy the resort area at one of the year's most joyous times.

There are many people involved in making Holidays at the Beach a success. The committee consists of hotel/motel owners, restaurant owners, the Resorts Programs Office, Neptune Festival/Ocean Occasions, and many more. These creative, dedicated people deserve a thank you for their efforts. They all have the Virginia Beach community and its residents in mind. They want the best for their hometown.

The opportunities are endless in Virginia Beach and are now even more so. Squeeze Holidays at the Beach in on your calendar, right next to the trip to the Virginia Marine Science Museum and a walk on the boardwalk. Bring the kids; there will be something for everyone. — K.L.D.

Ramada Receives Outstanding Food Award

The Ramada Resort Oceanside Tower North has been selected over all other Ramada Inns worldwide to receive the 1989 Outstanding Food Service award of the Ramada International Association (RINA) — Ramada owners and operators.

The award was presented to General Manager Clarence L. "Bubba" Reeves during the recent RINA convention in Atlantic City. It reflects overall excellence in food quality, menu preparation, presentation, customer service, and atmosphere.

The resort's Gus' Mariner Restaurant serves fresh seafood and unlike most hotel restaurants, has a predominantly local clientele. It won the 1988 People's Choice Award sponsored by the local Portfolio newspaper and was a top-10 finalist for the RINA

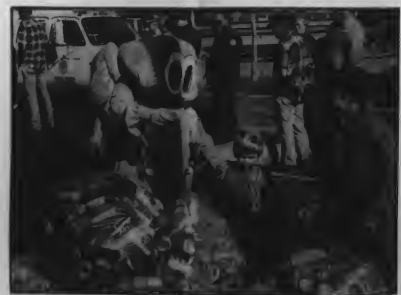

Outstanding Food Service award in 1987 and 1988. Thomas Evaldi, the restaurant's executive chef, is a Certified Working Chef and in February was voted Chef of the Year by his peers in the Tidewater Chefs Association.

The award-winning food service of the Ramada Resort Oceanside Tower North also may be sampled during banquets or meeting coffee breaks. One of the major conference hotels on the beach, the resort is able to accommodate up to 400 people in its meeting rooms.

The Ramada Hotel Group has three lodging products: Rodeway Inns, Ramada Inns and Hotels, and Renaissance Hotels. It owns, manages, franchises and has contracts for nearly 144,000 hotel rooms in more than 825 properties in 38 countries worldwide.

Two Tons Of Recyclables Collected At Recycle Saturday

"Recycle Saturday," the first regional recycling effort in the Hampton Roads area, was a major success based on reports of the total amount of items recycled.

More than 40 tons of recyclable material was collected, including aluminum, glass, plastics and newspaper. This represents the largest amount of recyclable material ever collected in a single day in Hampton Roads.

The event was sponsored by the Hampton Roads Municipal Communicators, Beautification/Clean Community Programs and a Norfolk television station. Recycling sites were set up in Chesapeake, Hampton, James City County, Newport News, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Suffolk, Virginia Beach and York County.

Recycle Saturday originated as an effort to boost public awareness of recycling and its impact on the environment.

City Sponsors Growth Management Seminar

The City of Virginia Beach, in conjunction with the Lincoln Institute of Land Policy, is sponsoring a seminar on Innovative Growth Management Techniques on Dec. 7 and 8 at the Cavalier Hotel.

Speakers include Florida Senator Bob Graham; Dr. Benjamin Chinitz, director of Research for the Lincoln Institute of Land Policy; Elizabeth Weichec, Mountain Restoration Trust from Santa Monica, Ca.; John Degrove, Florida University Joint Center for Environmental and Urban Problems; and directors of planning departments from localities involved with growth management issues.

The Lincoln Institute is a non-profit educational institution that facilitates the exploration of the impact of public policies including land policy and taxation on major social issues.

The conference fee of $85 includes lunch both days as well as an informative course manual. Registration must be received by Nov. 29. For additional information, contact the City of Virginia Beach Intergovernmental Relations office at 427-4721.

Community Services Board Conducts Public Hearing

The Virginia Beach Community Services Board will conduct a public hearing on its fiscal year 1991 draft comprehensive plan on Tuesday, Nov. 28, at 7 p.m., in room 101 of the Pavilion.

The Community Services Board is the local agency responsible to the City Council for public mental health, mental retardation and substance abuse services for the residents of Virginia Beach. The board is holding the public hearing to provide interested individuals in the community, as well as public and private agencies and organizations, an opportunity to express their views on the proposed plan.

Following the public hearing, the Community Services Board will adopt its final plan which will be the basis for requests for program and funding support from the City Council and the state.

Individuals interested in speaking at the hearing should call 499-3737. Each speaker will be allotted five minutes. Persons unable to attend the public hearing may submit written testimony by December 6 to the Community Services Board, Pembroke Six, Suite 208, Virginia Beach, Va. 23462.

Copies of the draft plan are available for public review at the Community Services Board, Wildwood Center, Comprehensive Mental Health Services, and all Virginia Beach Public Libraries. For more information, call 499-3737.

City Assists Needy Citizens With Home Heating

The City of Virginia Beach will again be assisting needy citizens with the cost of home heating this winter.

The Energy Assistance Program assists low-income families with the purchase of home heating fuels. A crisis assistance program also provides funding to repair or purchase heating equipment.

Applications will be taken at the Department of Social Services, 3432 Virginia Beach Boulevard, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. from now through Feb. 28, pending on the availability of funds. Eligibility is based on the size and income of the household and the primary fuel type.

Donations will also be accepted to assist clients whose needs exceed the amount of assistance available. For more information on this program, contact Brenda Whitaker at 431-3200.

The department is also in need of volunteers to assist in serving clients. Tasks include interviewing applicants, assisting them in completing applications and general clerical duties. To volunteer call Joy Sullivan at 431-3212.

Pickett To Hold Town Meeting For The Citizens

Second District Congressman Owen Pickett will hold a public town meeting for the citizens of Virginia Beach during the month of November.

The first meeting will be held in Virginia Beach on Saturday, Nov. 25 at 2 p.m. in the auditorium of the Virginia Beach Central Library at 4100 Virginia Beach Boulevard.

Pickett said the meetings are informal and give area residents the chance to express their opinions and to ask questions about federally-related issues.

"The first session of 101st Congress has been a lousy one, with important legislation in the areas of defense, environmental protection, and deficit reduction.

Dramatic changes are taking place in eastern Europe and the Soviet Union that will have important implications for U.S. foreign policy."

"I look forward to discussing these and many other issues at the November town meetings," Pickett added.

Pickett stressed that members of his staff would be available at both town meetings to assist citizens in the district who may need help on issues such as Social Security, federal retirement, or other federal programs.

"I hope that as many residents as possible will plan on attending one of these two meetings," he concluded.

How To Deal With A Missing Persons Report

The Mayor's Report

Virginia Beach Mayor
The Honorable
Meyera Oberndorf

Each year the Virginia Beach Police Department takes over 2,000 Runaway/Missing Persons reports. This number does not include the hundreds of adults and children who travel here from other states seeking refuge.

The public needs to understand the different types of missing persons and the problems associated with handling such cases.

There is a tremendous misconception of the term "missing children." When you hear the term, "missing children," the average person thinks of a four- or five-year-old child being abducted by a stranger. We have all heard statements such as 1.5 million are reported missing every so many minutes of every day. These are statistically true statements, although in actuality 96 to 97 percent of all missing children are classified as runaways.

Of the remaining number of children, 80 percent are victims of parental kidnapping and, in these cases, someone hopefully, is concerned for the child. These facts show that the actual number of children abducted by a stranger is very small. This is not meant to minimize the seriousness of child abduction, but in order to reduce the size of the problem, you have to understand the problem.

The Virginia Beach Police Department has developed three categories of missing person:

Each year the Virginia Beach Police Department takes over 2,000 Runaway/Missing Persons reports.

Missing Children — Any child under the age of 12 is classified as a missing child unless there is evidence to warrant another classification, such as a note left stating the child has run away or previous runaways. Any time a child is reported missing in this category, the officer will take a report. The report will be assigned to an investigator for follow-up investigation.

Missing Person — Any person over the age of 17 is classified as a missing person. Police officers are to take the report of a missing person immediately. The report will then be assigned to an investigator, who will review the case, and conduct a follow-up investigation.

Runaways — Runaways are a tremendous problem and one that is continuing to grow. Since having 1,151 reported runaways in the City of Virginia Beach in 1984, the number has grown to 2,000 in the year of 1988.

Thanks To Parents Who Help Their Kids Succeed

The VBEA Report

By Clair Polley,
President of the Virginia
Beach Education Association

Parental involvement is one of the most frequent suggestions on improving the success of students in school. Research now shows what teachers and involved parents have long known: when parents help their child at home in a particular subject, the student's achievement goes up in that subject.

Teachers are not crying out for parental involvement because they want to shift the blame for the many students who are not succeeding in school. Teachers are crying out because there has never been a time that children succeeded in school without parental involvement.

Often, the teachers lament that parents don't care about their child's success in school. This myth is especially true for poor families. Joyce Epstein, a parental involvement researcher at John Hopkins, says that, "data collected from parents in most economically depressed communities simply don't support the assumption. Parents say they want their children to succeed; they want to help them; and they need the school's and teacher's help to know what to do with their children at each grade level."

Until schools invent ways to teach parents how to be involved, parents will never understand and importance of that involvement. If you ask a crowd of adults to raise their hands if they need to their children each night, a number of hands would be raised. If you then asked those to lower their hands if their parents read to them there would be very few hands left in the air. The point is that much of our parenting skills were learned from our parents and if our parents were not involved in our education it is difficult to imagine our own involvement with our children.

Epstein claims that 75 percent of today's parents need help in learning how to be involved with their children's school work. Is it any surprise that national assessments indicate that approximately 30 percent of all school age children are truly successful in school?

With all the talk about restructuring schools, we can all hope that part of that effort is inventing ways to help all parents be involved. For every fam-

Thanksgiving For Our Constitutional Republic

By Lillian Youell,
Virginia Beach Constitution
Consultant

On Thursday, most of us will celebrate Thanksgiving with friends and families, feasting on turkey with the traditional trimmings. But this year is special. It marks the 200th anniversary of the first presidential Thanksgiving Proclamation, issued by President George Washington in response to a congressional resolution in 1789.

That first proclamation called on the people to give thanks for the new government under the Constitution. More than ever we the People should renew our commitment to that document which has guaranteed our freedoms for two centuries.

During this year, we have witnessed a great ongoing struggle for freedom by people throughout the world. In China, many died in a futile effort to achieve what we take for granted. In Poland, after years of struggle, a new government is in place. In Germany, the Berlin Wall ceases to be a barrier and has become more of a monument - a reminder that government cannot forever suppress the will of the people.

In light of these historic events, we Americans owe special thanks for our constitutional republic. Mary Bruner, chairman of the city's Constitution Celebration Commission urges the city's clergy - priests, rabbis and ministers - to remind their congregations this weekend of the message of that first Thanksgiving Proclamation:

"Whereas it is the duty of all nations to acknowledge the providence of

During this year, we have witnessed a great ongoing struggle for freedom by people throughout the world.

Almighty God, to obey His will, to be grateful for His benefits, and humbly to implore His protection and favor; and

Whereas both Houses of Congress have, by their joint committee, requested me to recommend to the people of the United States a day of public thanksgiving and prayer, to be observed by acknowledging with grateful hearts the many and signal favors of Almighty God, especially by affording them an opportunity peaceably to establish a form of government for their safety and happiness:

Now, therefore, I do recommend and assign Thursday, the 26th day of November next, to be devoted by the people of these states to the service of that great and glorious Being who is the beneficent author of all the good that was, that is, or that will be; that we may then all unite in rendering unto Him our sincere and humble thanks for His kind care and protection of the people of this country previous to their becoming a nation; for the sig-

NAS's Newly Assigned Navy Chaplain Is Female Priest

By Annette Hall
Special To The Sun

In the past decade, the Episcopal Church in America began ordaining women to the priesthood.

"At a very early age, I felt a call to be a minister but that wasn't an option for years and years," says Lieutenant Junior Grade (LTJG) Peggy Buelow, an Episcopal priest and a Navy chaplain who was commissioned last summer.

Her recent assignment to the Naval Air Station (NAS) Oceana Chapel of the Good Shepherd is a first for the master jet base, no other female priest precedes her.

"My husband, Peter, brought me to the Episcopal Church," says Buelow of her conversion in 1979 from the Baptist faith.

In preparation for confirmation in Pensacola, Florida, Buelow was able to talk with the priest about the resurging desire to heed her call to serve.

Pursuit of the priesthood took firmer hold when Buelow's husband was assigned to NAS Norfolk in 1981. Expecting a more liberal attitude in Virginia, Buelow discovered that the bishop at that time was not ordaining women.

"However, he said he would stand behind me if I went to seminary," notes Buelow of her progress. Since then the bishop changed his position and according to Buelow, "he has become really supportive of women."

The next hurdle was during her husband's assignment in Annapolis, Md. Buelow entered the Virginia Theological Seminary and commuted daily for three years to Alexandria, Va.

Although her three children were excited for her, Buelow notes that, "We spent some time struggling with (the prospect) before I made the commitment to start seminary."

Older now, they tease her about being a priest in the Episcopal church. "They have threatened to get me a license plate that says 'Father Peg,'" muses Buelow. And she adds, "Their peers give them a hard time about their mother, the father."

After seminary, Buelow was ordained to the diaconate in 1986 at the Church of the Ascension in Norfolk and ordained to the priesthood in 1987 at the Church of All Saints in Virginia Beach, where she served three years.

A Navy dependent all her life, as a child and later as a wife, and an ombudsman in the helicopter community, Buelow was encouraged along the way to enter the Navy chaplaincy. "When I heard from Washington saying there were age waivers, I decided to apply last December," explains Buelow. After coming on active duty July 5, she completed eight weeks of chaplain's school in Newport, R.I.

"I thought coming into the Navy would be an easy transition, but I discovered it was very hard when I went to swap my brown identification card (ID) for a green one. I didn't want to get rid of it — I really struggled with an identity crisis because for so long those people who wore uniforms were the men in my life," admits Buelow. "It felt very strange to be taking that kind of role. I'm used to wandering through military bases and not worrying about saluting and realizing now, that I have to pay attention."

Chaplain Buelow has a great respect for voluntary actions of Navy personnel and their families. She saw an immediate response to a call for help for the victims of Hurricane Hugo. Project coordinator for food collection to help feed the needy during the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays, Buelow again has seen a generous response.

Time is divided between the chapel and her office space in Hangar 111. Housed in the hangar, Buelow considers her ministry among 17, 18 and 19-year-olds as "a wonderful opportunity."

She has an open door policy and is currently working with those interested in re-establishing ties with the church, those with marital difficulties, those with humanitarian needs and those looking to continue faith development.

Navy Chaplain Peggy Buelow, an Episcopal priest, has been assigned to the Naval Air Station Oceana Chapel of the Good Shepherd. In addition to conducting worship services, her duties are divided between the chapel and an office in Hangar 111 to be more accessible.

V.B. Center For The Arts Highlights Guest Speakers

Three special guest speakers from Virginia, Los Angeles, and New York City will lecture at the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts in November and December. These presentations highlight the international exhibition, An Eclectic Eye: Selections from the Frederick R. Weisman Art Foundation.

Henry T. Hopkins, director of the Los Angeles-based Frederick R. Weisman Art Foundation, leads a gallery talk and tour on Saturday, Dec. 2, at 10:30 a.m.

New York artist Gary Stephan, whose work is in the Weisman collection and exhibition, speaks on Sunday, Dec. 3, at 3 p.m.

Suzanne Foley, curator at the Bayley Art Museum, University of Virginia, has been a museum director, curator, and art historian specializing in 20th century arts for nearly 30 years. She was director of the University Art Museum, University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee; curator at the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art; and associate curator at the Walker Art Center, Minneapolis. As an independent curator, she organized Ceramic Sculpture: Six Artists, 1981, at the Whitney Museum of American Art; and wrote numerous publications on conceptual art, ceramics and minimalist sculpture, including the works of Robert Arneson, Carl Andre, Donald Judd, and Tony Smith.

On Dec. 2, Henry Hopkins will lead a gallery talk and tour discussing the Eclectic Eye exhibition, emphasizing well-known artists Christo, Robert Motherwell, Gilbert and George, Alex Katz, Red Grooms, Ellsworth Kelly, Ed Ruscha, James Rosenquist and Andy Warhol. Many artists whose work has become recognized in the past decade — the late Jean-Michel Basquiat, Sandro Chia, Gary Stephan, Cheryl Laemmle, and Richard Thompson — are included as well.

Hopkins entered the museum world in the 1960s at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art after earning his Ph.D. from the University of California (UCLA). He was director of the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art from 1974 to 1986, where he was responsible for outstanding exhibitions by Jasper Johns, Robert Rauschenberg, Robert Motherwell, and Peter Voulkos, and organized the museum's first and third biennials in 1980 and 1984.

Hopkins doubled the size and vastly improved the quality of their permanent collection, and also arranged major gifts and purchases of works by Joseph Cornell, Richard Diebenkorn, Philip Guston, and Mark Rothko. He had previously served as director of the Fort Worth Art Center Museum in Texas.

Hopkins has written and lectured extensively on contemporary art throughout the United States. He is the author of three books: Fifty West Coast Artists, 1982; Clifford Still, 1976; and California Painting and Sculpture: The Modern Era, 1976. Additionally, he has contributed to catalogues on Josef Albers, Joan Miro, Robert Rauschenberg, and Ed Ruscha, among others.

He has served as a panelist for the National Endowment for the Arts, National Endowment for the Humanities, and trustee of the Art Museum Association of America, and the Association of Art Museum Directors.

Gary Stephan is a painter living in Manhattan and represented in the Eclectic Eye exhibition. On Dec. 3, he will speak about his painting career, present slides, and answer audience questions. His work has been included in numerous group exhibitions including: The Image of Abstraction, 1988, Museum of Contemporary Art, Los Angeles; Paravision, 1985, Postmasters Gallery, New York; An International Survey of Recent Painting and Sculpture, 1984, Museum of Modern Art, New York; Five Painters in New York, 1984, Whitney Museum of American Art, New York; and shows at the Guggenheim Museum, the New Museum of Contemporary Art, New York; Milwaukee Art Museum, Aldrich Museum of Contemporary Art, Connecticut; and Norfolk's Chrysler Museum.

Stephan's solo exhibition in the 1970s and 1980s include national and international galleries such as Dart Gallery, Chicago; Galleria Lia Rumma, Naples, Italy; Galerie Neufendorf, Cologne, West Germany; Margo Leavin Gallery, Los Angeles; and Mary Boone, Diane Brown, Marlborough, and Hirsch and Adler Modern, all New York City galleries.

Stephan earned his MFA from the San Francisco Art Institute in 1967. His artist's bibliography includes the publications Artforum, ARTS, Flash Art, ARTnews, Art in America, Vanity Fair, The Village Voice and the New York Times.

The Gary Stephan lecture is free and open to the public in the Center's Price Auditorium. The gallery talk by Henry Hopkins requires gallery admission ($2 for adults, free for VBCA members) and is open to the public.

The Virginia Beach Center for the Arts is located at 22nd Street and Park Avenue, across from the Pavilion Convention Center, at the west-bound entrance to Route 44. For information, telephone the Center office at 425-0000.

Boardwalk Art Show Aps Taken

Applications are now available for the 35th Boardwalk Art Show to be held Thursday, June 14 through Sunday, June 17, 1990.

Limited to 350 artists, whose work will be displayed along the boardwalk at the Virginia Beach oceanfront, this has become one of the finest juried outdoor art shows in the United States. Expected attendance is over 350,000, with predicted sales topping $750,000.

Artists who wish to participate must return a completed application and slides of their work by March 1, 1990. A screening committee will view the slides to determine eligibility, and notification will be mailed on March 27, 1990.

For more information or to receive an application contact the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts, 2200 Park Avenue, Virginia Beach, Va., 23451-4062; or call 425-0000.

Orchestra Holds French Fest

The Virginia Beach Community Orchestra will present a concert as part of the Tidewater French Festival on Tuesday, Nov. 28 at 8 p.m. in the sanctuary of the Virginia Beach United Methodist Church.

The program will include two major works by French composers. Dr. Carl Gilmer, organist, will join the orchestra for a performance of Saint-Saens' Symphony No. 3, Op. 78 (Organ Symphony). Gilmer will perform on the church's 50-rank Cassavant pipe organ. The Virginia Symphonic Chorus will join the orchestra for Arthur Honegger's dramatic symphonic psalm, King David.

Also included in the performance will be Narrator J. Scottie Griffin and Shirley Hurd as the "Witch of Endor."

The Virginia Beach United Methodist Church is located at 19th Street and Pacific Avenue at the Oceanfront and has free parking. The concert is free and open to the public.

A.R.E. Students Graduate

Six students recently graduated from Atlantic University. Each received a master's degree in transpersonal studies. It was the school's first graduating class.

Kevin Todeschi, an A.R.E. staff member who completed his degree work in 1988, waited to be joined by five other students in the university's first commencement exercises. Fellow graduates are Father Charles Cantenna of Baltimore, Md.; Mark Dressing of Arivaca, Az.; Margit Nassi, Anita Peterson and Carl Poland.

The diplomas were presented by Dr. Charles Thomas Cayce, interim president of the university; Dr. James Windsor, former university president; Gary Christie, chairman of the Board of Trustees of A.R.E.; the university; Gary Christie, chairman of the Board of Trustees of A.R.E.; the university, and Edgar Cayce Foundation; and Dr. Glenn Olds, former president of Kent State University and the Fetter Foundation and current president of the Better World Society.

Olds delivered the commencement address, citing the importance of educating the whole person and spotlighting the university's role in such a holistic education process.

The graduates also were honored at a banquet, where each briefly shared some of their university experiences.

The university continues to offer classes to resident and to independent-study correspondence-course students. Its second graduation exercises are scheduled for 1990.

Church

First Church Nazarene Revival

First Church of the Nazarene will hold its Fall Revival Wednesday, Nov. 29 through Dec. 3 at 7 p.m. each week night and 10:40 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. on Sunday.

Two hundred to 300 people are expected to attend the revival, which will feature Reverend Chuck Millhuff, a nationally known evangelist.

Childcare will be provided for children ages three and under.

There is no charge for the revival.

Miss Hawaiian Tropic International contestant, Christine Patelidas, of Starfish Drive, receives a warm "hello" from Belinda, a Beluga whale, and trainer Jeff Heimerman, at Sea World of Florida.

Patelidas Competes For Miss Hawaiian Tropic

Patelidas and 50 other Miss Hawaiian Tropic contestants spent a day in Florida taking a role in a variety of Sea World activities. Patelidas will compete in the Miss Hawaiian Tropic pageant on March 18 and 19 in Daytona Beach, Fla. during Spring Break.

Marine Science Museum

- Make an "aquarium," print a fish and then visit the Chesapeake Bay aquarium at the Virginia Marine Science Museum.
- Children, three to five years-old, are invited to participate in this workshop on Wednesday, Dec. 6, at 1 p.m. Children must be accompanied by an adult. The fee is $3 for members and $5 for non members.
- Learn the art of fish printing on fabric at the Virginia Marine Science Museum on Saturday, Dec. 2 at 1 p.m. Participants will make fish prints on both paper and fabric so be sure to bring t-shirts or towels for printing.
- The workshop will be led by Sherrie Rakoff of Sher Fish Designs in Nags Head. The fee is $10 for members and $12 for non-members and is open to adults only.
- The Virginia Marine Science Museum will host a trip to Chincoteague National Wildlife Refuge on Saturday, Dec. 9, from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Look for snow geese, tundra swan, brant and a variety of ducks. See wild horses, deer and other mammals. Bring lunch, drinks, binoculars and field guides.

The fee is $20 for members and $25 for non-members. Pre registration is required.

- A waterfowl photography exhibit is appearing in the Changing Exhibits Gallery at the Virginia Marine Science Museum through Jan. 4.
- This exhibition is sponsored by the Back Bay Wildfowl Guild which will award cash prizes for first, second, third and three honorable mention places. All bird and photography enthusiasts are invited to view this colorful exhibit.
- Twenty-four different sands move into view for visitors' close inspection at the new "Sand Around the World" exhibit at the Virginia Marine Science Museum. Specifically designed microscopes allow the viewer to compare a variety of textures and materials which make up the sand around the world.

The exhibit features collections from Yugoslavia, Greece, Australia, Hawaii and Virginia Beach.

- Balloons, food coloring and everyday household items will be used in a saltwater tank to bring alive certain principals of seawater at the Virginia Marine Science Museum on Saturday, and Sunday, Dec. 9 and 10 at 1:30 p.m.
- Maylon White, the museum's oceanographic exhibits curator, will present the demonstration.
- Learn about the best seafood for every season in Virginia Beach at the Virginia Marine Science Museum on Sunday, Dec. 3, at 1:30 p.m.
- Cookbook author Mary Reid Barrow and museum education coordinator Lynn Clements will lead the program.
- In addition to seafood preparation, participants will learn how to shuck an oyster and clean a fish. Admission is free with admission to the museum.

Mayor's Report

Any child between the ages of, and including, 12 to 17, are classified as runaways. The case will then be assigned to an investigator who will do the follow-up investigation. This investigator is responsible for contacting the child's parents, contacting the child's friends, school, and other known areas where the child is known to frequent.

In order to deal with a runaway problem, you have to understand why juveniles are running away, what parents can do, and what is happening to the kids on the street.

Why Do Police Get Involved With Runaways

The police department gets involved with runaways for three reasons:

- 1) To attempt to locate the child for their own welfare. The police have the right to pick up and hold any child under the age of 18 in the state of Virginia for their own welfare if the child is determined to be a child in need of service.

- 2) To determine if any criminal activity was involved which may have caused the child to leave the home, such as physical or sexual abuse or child neglect.

- 3) To determine if the child was involved in any criminal activity during the time he or she was away from home.

The understanding and interviewing of these runaway youths is a tremendous asset in detecting and solving crimes.

Why Are Children Running Away?

There are many reasons why our children are running away. Some of the more common reasons are sexual or physical abuse in the home, young love, drug or alcohol problems, or just an inability to talk to their parents, and they have no idea where to turn for help. Many of their problems seem small and simple to us, but are major to the troubled juvenile. It is important that we remember this fact.

Once a child has run from home, he or she has to survive on the street. One of the biggest problems facing the investigator is the adults that are trying to assist the juvenile. The child shows up at someone's door with inquiries or complaints of assault and the adult has the child come in to stay for a few days until things calm down. Not only are the adults breaking the law, but the child's credibility is going down the longer he or she stays away from home. Also, any physical evidence is lost. It is important that we not only educate the juveniles as where to go for help, but to educate the general public. The longer the juvenile stays away from home, the more difficult it is for them to return. The hold some of these street people gain over juveniles can be very strong. Breaking the chain of influence from a wrong peer group may prove impossible without professional help.

Child Exploiters

Once the child moves out on the street, they become vulnerable to anyone who wants to take advantage of them. There are many people that are just waiting to assist runaways. They gain the confidence of these kids and make them feel needed and then street them into criminal activities such as burglary, drug running, prostitution and pornography.

These people are very difficult to detect and prosecute because the testimony of the juvenile is usually needed in court. The victims are reluctant for several reasons:

- 1) The runaway is embarrassed for their friends to know what they have been involved in and will not admit what has happened to them.

- 2) The runaway is scared and in most cases has been threatened by the exploiter with retaliation for any prosecution.

- 3) If the runaway is having serious problems at home causing them to not want to be there, they know that they will end up leaving again. If they turn in the exploiter, then they will have nowhere to go when they again leave.

What Can Parents Do To Deal With This Problem

Concerned parents complain that they are sent from one facility to another, and that they receive no help in dealing with runaway children. They also feel that under the current system, the children, and not the parents, have all the rights. Parents need to know the police department's role in dealing with runaways.

The primary role of the police is to locate the child. Once the child is located, the parents are contacted and in most instances, the child will be returned to the parents. The police have no say in the disposition of the child unless there are criminal charges pending. Once the child is located, it is the responsibility of the parents to seek assistance through the courts, the Juvenile Inmate system or through professional counseling. Due to the stress created on the entire family, there may be times when an entire family will seek help.

In the future, our community will need additional shelters and treatment facilities for the runaway child; but public knowledge and support is the immediate requirement that we are seeking.

Taxes

The financing strategy report is being represented by consultants and the Commission staffs to the 14 political subdivisions that are members of the two Commissions.

Hassel, in answer to a question from Chesapeake Councilman Cecil Y. Jenkins, said that an authority on the southside only would be feasible, but that some of the key highways involve crossing to the Peninsula. The southside is really an island, he said, and to get anywhere, you have to cross water, some of it navigable water, which makes transportation very expensive.

Jenkins said that 14 jurisdictions would be almost unwieldy.

City Manager James R. Rein asked about the reaction from other jurisdictions so far.

Collins said that the other jurisdictions have expressed some of the same concerns. He said they believe a collective approach to the General Assembly is a good idea. Collins said that the Commission would have to know what the localities want by December to present the authority concept to the 1990 General Assembly.

Hassel pointed out that the upcoming General Assembly is the long session of the biennium when money is allocated. If the effort is delayed the region would have to wait two years for any funds.

Strategies recommended by the report include efforts to influence federal legislation and policies to increase federal funding for the rehabilitation of the interstate system and to allow tolls on Federal-aid highways, bridges, tunnels and interstates. The report also urges a bigger push to get transportation help for Hampton Roads related to the requirements of the military and to promote participation of the private sector in meeting transportation needs.

Chamber Names Keeling

John F. Keeling, Jr. has been elected chairman of the board of the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce for 1990.

Joining Keeling as the Chamber's top elected officers will be chairman-elect Townsend Oast, and treasurer, Gary L. Strickfaden. The three are among 50 elected and appointed officers and directors who will lead the 4,200-member organization in 1990.

Keeling will be sworn in during the ceremonies at the organization's annual meeting of the membership Dec. 5 at the Omni Hotel in Norfolk. At that time 1989 Chairman Frederick J. Napolitano of Virginia Beach will pass the gavel on to Keeling.

Since 1986, Keeling has served as area manager for C&P Telephone Company in the firm's eastern region of Virginia. He is responsible for interdepartmental operations, customer service, and external affairs.

Oast, the Chamber's president-elect, is president of Crestar Bank for the southwest Hampton Roads area. He is a native of Virginia and has an undergraduate and law degree, both from Washington and Lee University.

Strickfaden is the managing partner of the Hampton Roads practice of Peat Marwick Main & Co. He is a graduate of the University of Missouri.

Before coming to Hampton Roads in 1986, Strickfaden managed Peat Marwick offices in Decatur, Illinois, and Roanoke. He entered the partnership in the firm's St. Louis office in 1975.

In addition to Keeling, Strickfaden and Oast, the 1990 Executive Committee will consist of: Glenn Martin (Glenn Martin Chevrolet), vice chairman for business services; William K. Butler, II (Crestar Bank), vice chairman for economic development and chairman, Forward Hampton Roads; William A. Schlimgen (Talbot & Associates), vice chairman for governmental affairs; James F. Babcock (First Virginia Bank of Tidewater), vice chairman for marketing and public affairs; Howard I. Tew (Tew Construction), vice chairman for regional development and cooperation; and Clyde R. Hoey, II (Grimsley & Grimsley), chairman for small business and chairman of the Small Business Development Center of Hampton Roads. Also, Walter C. Ames, III (Virginia Power), chairman of the chamber's Chesapeake division; Susan G. Coe (Taste Unlimited), chairman of the chamber's Norfolk division; Ronnie A. Howell, Sr. (The Ronnie Howell Co.), chairman of the chamber's Portsmouth division; J.T. Thomas (Falcon Cable Media), chairman of the chamber's Suffolk division; Roger M. Pierce (Orbital Technologies), chairman of the chamber's Virginia Beach division; Frederick J. Napolitano (Pembroke Enterprises), immediate past chairman; and John A. Hornbeck, Jr., CCE, president and CEO of the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce.

Beginning new terms on the board of directors in 1990 are: Michael J. Barrett (The Runnymede Corp.), James F. Baur (Lips Propellers), Franklin R. Bowers (Cox Cable Hampton Roads), Francis D. Bowman (Bowman & Associates), Gerald T. Chessner (Planners Life-Savers Co.), Harry L. Cross, III (Cross Realty), Kenneth W. Farmer (Central Fidelity Bank), Richard Gilligan (Ford Motor Co.), Richard J. Harrison (Harrison & Theraeul, P.C.), Richard F. Kieffer (Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance), VADM Vincent A. Lascara (The Jonathan Corp.), Dr. George Pass (Tidewater Community College), Louis F. Ryan (Landmark Communications), John T. Stone (Maryview Medical Center), and Douglas W. Talbot (Talbot Management Enterprises).

The chamber's top volunteer leaders will meet Dec. 1 for a day-long retreat to discuss the organization's long-range goals and objectives.

Snyman President Of Lynnway Board

Lynnway Office Park Association officers recently elected Dr. Cindy Snyman to serve as president of its Board for the 1989-90 year.

Snyman replaced John Lubking who served as president the previous year.

Police Trying To Locate Charleen Vilinger

Crime Solvers is requesting help in locating Charlene Marie Vilinger, who has been missing for almost two months. Her disappearance is suspicious and she has not been heard from or seen since Sept. 3.

On that Sunday evening, shortly after 10 p.m., Charlene Vilinger's husband returned to their home in the 900 block of Penhook Court in the Glenwood section of Virginia Beach and found her missing. There was no sign of a struggle and none of her personal belongings were missing, including her car which

Vilinger was a student at Tidewater Community College and is described as white, 5'6" and 160 pounds. She has wavy brown hair to her shoulders, a medium complexion, and a tattoo of a pink panther on her left shoulder blade. Vilinger was last seen wearing a white t-shirt and white slacks with blue and red dots.

Anyone with information about her disappearance is asked to call Crime Solvers at 427-0000. All calls are confidential and callers will not have to give their name. If information leads to an arrest, callers

Police Seek Motel Robbers

Crime Solvers would like help in identifying a composite of one of the men who robbed a Virginia Beach motel. Anyone who can provide information that helps solve this crime, will receive a cash reward of up to $1,000.

One man is described as black, six feet tall, in his late 20s or early 30s, with a medium build, and short black hair. He was wearing a white t-shirt with red and blue stripes on the collar, blue jeans, and what appeared to be a class ring with a red stone on his left hand.

The other man is also black, in his late 20s or early 30s, five feet four inches, with a medium build, and curly, unkempt black hair. He was wearing dark green pants and a rust colored, short sleeve shirt.

Anyone with information about this or any other robbery can call Crime Solvers at 427-0000. All calls are confidential and rewards are paid in cash.

On Friday, Oct. 13, at 9:10 p.m., two men walked into the lobby of the Ocean Island Motel at 3174 Page Avenue near the Lynnhaven Inlet. One of the men pulled a silver handgun from his waistband, pointed it at the clerk, and demanded money. After getting the money the clerk was forced to lie face down on the floor and was struck in the back of the head with the gun.

Police Seek Truck Thieves

Crime Solvers would like help in solving the thefts of five vending company delivery trucks in the last two months. A cash reward of up to $1,000 is being offered for information that will lead to an arrest.

Between August 31, and Oct. 20, five local vending company delivery trucks were stolen in Virginia Beach. The thefts occurred while the drivers were making deliveries and away from the truck. Three of the five trucks were later found abandoned in the Lake Edward section of the city. Thieves made off with thousands of dollars in coins, cigarettes and candy. Four of the trucks had been hotwired, according to investigators.

Anyone with information about these or any other vehicle thefts, can contact Crime Solvers anonymously at 427-0000. Phone calls to Crime Solvers are never recorded or traced and rewards are paid in cash.

Bubba's Beach Club - "It Burnt To A Crisp"

By Greg Goldfarb

Two or three loud explosions, one of which sent window glass across Laskin Road to a service station, is the apparent cause of an early Monday morning two-alarm fire that completely destroyed Bubba's Beach Club.

What caused the explosion is unknown. A fire department investigation is continuing.

The explosions, said owner Robert Nicklin, were not caused by a gas or electrical problem. The flames were intense enough, however, to completely gut within 30 minutes the 2,600 square-foot club at 404 Laskin Road.

"There's nothing," he said. "It burnt to a crisp." Nicklin said the fire department told him the fire's origin is suspicious in nature. He also said that it would cost between $50,000 and $100,000 to rebuild. He had been open for eight months.

Five pumpers, two ladder trucks, a salvage unit and a rescue unit responded to the call which the fire department received at 2:39 a.m., said Jim Kellam, fire department district chief. It was declared under control at 3:17 a.m. Twenty-five firefighters in all were used to battle the flames. One was injured.

Nicklin said he left the building at 2:05 a.m., and that 20 minutes later it was blazing. He was notified, he said, by the service station across the street, which reported hearing explosions and finding glass shards in its parking lot.

Nicklin said he had received no threats or warnings that he or his business was in danger, adding that Bubba's had established a reputation as Virginia Beach's "Cheers," where local, the military and tourists alike mixed.

"There are people all over the city crying right now," he said. Nicklin said Bubba's, which had been open for eight months,

Jeanard's Salon Also Ravaged By Fire

Jeanard Designer Hair Cuts had been in its location for 15 years, but an early Monday morning fire completely destroyed the styling shop on the west side of Bubba's Beach Club on Laskin Road.

"The ceiling blew off," said Brenda Mitchum, whose mother, Gean Yarbrough, owns the salon. "It's gone. It can't be saved."

Besides possibly a small couch and a seat, everything in the salon was destroyed by fire, Mitchum said. She said it would cost at least $20,000 just to clean the place, much less furnish and resupply it.

She said "most likely" insurance will cover the damages.

CIP Provides No Money For Sandbridge Sewer

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The proposed Capital Improvement Program provided for no funding for public sewers in Sandbridge and the adopted program contains no funding for the project. The difference is that the budget approved by City Council shows that Sandbridge sewers have been removed from the second five years of the ten-year program. The $17 million project had been given a place on the city's priority list with funding anticipated during the second five years of the program.

Although City Council lifted the project from the list so that more study could be given to the pros and cons, it reserved for the project the same place in line so that if the project is eventually approved, no time will be lost.

Of the 20 citizens who spoke at the Capital Program public hearing, 13 spoke on the Sandbridge sewers, some for and some against.

Other subjects which interested speakers were the Military Highway flyover (they do not want it); the realignment of Centerville Turnpike between Indian River Road and Kempville Road; and the possible operation of a planned additional 18-hole golf course at Red Wing Park by private interests.

Council appropriated $139,636,771 to finance the first year, 1989-90, of the $511,247,915 program through the fiscal year 1993-94 which was adopted.

The appropriation reflects the exclusion of $16 million of the special 1988 and 1989 road bond authority, but a resolution also adopted authorizes the 1989 $8 million authority, but defers its use. The same type of resolution was adopted by Council in relation to the 1988 authority. Under the special authority Council is entitled to borrow $8 million a year for eight years for road construction. The staff had presented an option which would have had the city use the $16 million — $14 million to accelerate the Salem Road project and $2 million for local roads.

Councilman William D. Sessions Jr., who has consistently promoted the use of bonds, said again that "anytime we have the opportunity to improve the road system of Virginia Beach we should do so." He added that the debt incurred by the sale of the bonds will be paid by the State and would not necessitate a tax increase or delay other road projects.

He said, however, that he realized Council made a commitment on Dec. 12 not to use the bonds until the issue over the transfer of development rights (TDR) and the growth management plan are settled. He said that when these two issues are in place, he would reintroduce the reinstatement of the $16 million.

Also adopted was a real estate tax rate increase of 4.9 cents to finance the 1989 school bond referendum and a .6 cent increase to finance the Judicial Center project increasing the total tax rate from $.977 to $1.032 on a $100 valuation.

Also adopted were ordinances authorizing the issuance of general obligation bonds of the City of Virginia Beach of $29.2 million for various public facilities and general improvements and the authorization of the issuance of water and sewer system revenue bonds of $8,940,000.

All of the budget items were approved unanimously. However, in the vote over on Sandbridge sewers, the vote was 8-3 with Councilmen John A. Baum and William E. Sessions and Councilwoman Reba McClanahan dissenting.

McClanahan wanted to leave the item in the budget with the understanding that the staff would continue study on the project.

She said that when the city adopts policies it should stick to them. Sandbridge has been declared a health hazard because of its septic tanks and at least 51 percent of the property owners there signed petitions for public sewer which earn them a place on the city's priority list.

McClanahan said that by leaving the project in the budget for the second five years of the plan, the staff will have the opportunity to study the situation while the neighborhood will have the assurance that it is being treated equally with other sections of the city.

She said that when she first joined Council she voted against sewer projects for the same reasons given by some of the speakers, and she voted against the city's sewer policy. She said that she was not happy with the discontent of the community. "I like to work with neighbors that agree."

She said that many things have been displayed because of waiting for conditional zoning, for TDRs. She pointed out that leaving the project in the budget is not moving it up, and is not delaying it. She said that she sees no point in using it as a campaign tool as it will be used in the spring.

Henley said that under present zoning, 29 acres zoned B-4 Commercial could be developed with public sanitary sewers. She said that it was not the intent of Council to change the character of Sandbridge but that she did know that what the City Council intends is not always what happens.

She said that courts have ruled for development when infrastructure is in place. She said that an appropriate growth management plan might allow the city to overcome incompatibility, but the plan needs to be in place first. She also said that she wanted to be assured that, if approved, the sewer project will not be a continuous raid on the utilities department because of erosion.

Even if left in the budget, the project is not scheduled to be funded until 1993-1994 and would not be constructed until 1996-99.

She said that the Sandbridge sewers place in the list of priorities can be maintained by keeping its place in line open. Approving the project now, she said, is premature and would be a moral commitment to do the project.

Baum said he hated the way

Sandbridge was developed. He said that while the property between Lago Mar and Sandbridge is not high enough to farm and doesn't seem suitable for development, it is difficult to say what the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, which controls wetlands, will ultimately decide. He said that some of the same people who expressed concern about Back Bay ignore the pollution from septic systems. He said people need to be consistent.

Speakers against having public sewers in their neighborhood said more intense growth will follow, that the health hazard has been overstated and that $17 million is an expensive fix.

Supporters of the sewers said that the anti-sewer property owners did not want anyone else at Sandbridge, that they (pro-sewer owners) did not want to be treated differently from other neighborhoods in the city, that they did not want to ignore the health and welfare of the community, and without sewers the only alternative is condemnation.

Sheila Price, of Sandbridge, asked Council not to do anything until the studies on the southern end of the city are complete.

Jim Martinette, of Sandbridge, said that his son developed dysentery and a high fever after swimming in a canal in the neighborhood. He said that the doctor suggested that the Health Department test for pollution and tests showed the canal was contaminated. The problem is not going to go away, he said. He said that the sewer line does not have to come down Sandbridge Road, which some of the speakers feared would develop with sewers.

Moody Stallings, an attorney and property owner at Sandbridge, said that he was concerned about the development of all the land between the Nimmo Church and Sandbridge. He said he was not anti-growth, but that development here is a little premature, particularly now, when the area is having so many problems with Sandbridge Road. He said

TDR At B May Keep Land Costs From Rising

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Consultants told City Council that a transferable development rights program (TDR) would work in Virginia Beach and would even tend to keep land costs from escalating.

The report on TDRs was presented by Charles A. Siemon, of the Chicago consulting firm of Siemon, Larsen and Purdy.

The report recommends that the city request the 1990 General Assembly for TDR enabling legislation similar to the request made to the 1989 General Assembly, but expanded in scope to apply to a range of other cities, counties and towns rather than to just Virginia Beach.

The Legislature in 1989 tabled the request so that a legislative committee could study the concept further. Virginia Beach hired consultants to answer questions forwarded by the committee. The Chicago firm worked with two other firms to prepare the report — Rogers, Golden and Halpern of Philadelphia, and Hammer, Siler, George Associates of Silver Spring, Md. The TDR program is a mechanism intended to preserve agricultural uses and the environment in the southern portion of the city.

Siemon also said that he recommended that the sale of development rights be in perpetuity. That is, once the landowner sells the rights to develop his land, he can never develop the land. An earlier discussion of TDRs set a time limit (one figure was 20 years) on the period during which the property owner could not develop the land on which the rights had been sold.

Siemon said that legislation should assure the people that future councils would not undo what this Council does.

TDRs provide for property owners to sell their development rights to developers outside the area who want to increase densities permitted on their properties.

The report recommends a protected area south of the "Blue Line," which is south of the traditional "Green Line," and those lands in the Back Bay Subarea of the lands between the Green Line and the Blue Line.

Siemon said, however, that in areas where TDRs have been used, only a portion of these TDRs are sold by the property owners. He also said that it often takes a number of years for the program to catch on.

If the city were to choose to purchase the development rights (PDR) in the protected area, it would cost approximately $125 million for land south of the Green Line and $108 million for land south of the Blue Line. Financing for the larger acquisition would require an 8.5 cent tax on a $100 real estate valuation.

Whether by PDR or TDR, the objective of protecting resources and offering the landowner a way to realize some financial return on his property will be realized.

Siemon told Council, however, that the Comprehensive Plan being developed for the southern part of the city would not be finished for two or three months.

Using city assessment records, which he said include consideration of mitigating factors such as wetlands, the report includes formulas on determining the value of land covered by TDRs. What the developer will pay for the land will depend on use, density and size of the project in the receiving areas.

Siemon said that the cost of purchasing TDRs could be absorbed more easily by developers of larger projects, especially where the cost

City Wins Governor's Clean Virginia Award Of Merit; Second Time

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

For the second year in a row, the City of Virginia Beach will be the recipient of the Governor's Clean Virginia Award, which is co-sponsored by the Virginia Department of Waste Management and Keep Virginia Beautiful, Inc.

Based on community involvement in planning and organization, education in the schools, communications, sustained clean up and law enforcement, Virginia Beach will receive an Award of Merit at the Keep Virginia Beautiful Awards to be held in Richmond in January.

Last year, the city won the first place award, the Award of Excellence.

"Actually, I was hoping we were going to get that this year. We always strive for that. Second place isn't that bad. Hopefully next year we'll win that award," said Ruby Arrandondo, Virginia Beach Clean Community Commission coordinator.

The commission conducted several litter prevention programs this past year such as the auto litter bag program, where citizens could obtain litter bags at nine different locations across the city. The commission also generated $300 from its Labels for America program by collecting UPC labels from different products.

"It helped spread the word about litter prevention and awareness," Arrandondo said.

Another program was April Awareness Month. Seventeen recycling displays were placed in Lynnhaven Mall so people could receive information about the environment. An art contest was held in conjunction with the program and $90 in prizes were given out to the winners.

"We always hope to expand, especially with the educational programs," Arrandondo said.

Under the Litterer Postcard program, citizens can report any driver who was seen littering from their vehicle by jotting down the license plate number, the date and the time. The commission then sends the litterer a post card asking them not to litter again.

The commission also conducts group presentations at schools; civic organizations and youth groups.

"It's more of an important audience," Arrandondo said of the school-aged children to which the programs are targeted. "It's something they'll grow up with. If you can reach them at an early age it's much easier."

The commission already has programs in the works for this year. "We always hope to expand, especially with the educational programs. We constantly have to do our educational programs. We hope to expand it to more of the schools," she said.

The litter prevention programs are done on request. To have a program presented to your school or organization call the Clean Community Commission at 427-4101.

It's Beautiful

Virginia Beach is a beautiful city, we all know that. The reason for it is because the city's employees and citizens work hard at it.

Virginia Beach's efforts for litter control, recycling and beautification have certainly paid off. The Virginia Beach Clean Community Commission has been awarded the Governor's Clean Virginia Award of Merit. And it's not the first time.

Virginia Beach has taken the time to educate its residents about the importance of controlling litter and keeping the city clean. Thanks to the commission's projects and programs, many people have taken the issue seriously and have become involved. Even children are pitching in.

The commission mainly targets school-aged children, because they are the most easily influenced. If they learn at an early age not to throw trash out the windows, hopefully it will prevent them from doing it as adults.

The city should be commended on its efforts to make Virginia Beach a beautiful place in which to live. How our city looks has a great impact on the number of people who come to visit. And Virginia Beach thrives on its tourism.

Hopefully everyone will be involved in the future. The more people who participate in recycling and beautification projects, the more positive recognition the city will get. — K.L.D.

A.R.E. Students Graduate

Six students recently graduated from Atlantic University. Each received a master's degree in transpersonal studies. It was the school's first graduating class.

Kevin Todeschi, an A.R.E. staff member who completed his degree work in 1988, waited to be joined by five other students in the university's first commencement exercises. Fellow graduates are Father Charles Cantera of Baltimore, Md.; Mark Dressang of Arivaca, Az.; Margit Nassi, Anita Peterson and Carl Poland.

The diplomas were presented by Dr. Charles Thomas Cayce, interim president of the university; Dr. James Windsor, former university president; Gary Christie, chairman of the Board of Trustees of A.R.E., the university; Gary Christie, chairman of the Board of Trustees of A.R.E., the university, and Edgar Cayce Foundation; and Dr. Glenn Olds, former president of Kent State University and the Fetzer Foundation and current president of the Better World Society.

Olds delivered the commencement address, citing the importance of educating the whole person and spotlighting the university's role in such an holistic education process.

The graduates also were honored at a banquet, where each briefly shared some of their university experiences.

The university continues to offer classes to resident and to independent study correspondence course students. Its second graduation exercises are scheduled for 1990.

Jaycees Sponsor Daffodil Planting

The Virginia Beach Jaycees recently co-sponsored Operation Sunburst's second public daffodil planting, in conjunction with the city's Landscaping Services, the Chamber of Commerce, B.H. "Pat" Bridges and former Virginia Beach Mayor Bob Jones.

The planting, which was held at Mt. Trashmore, was done to enhance Virginia Beach's image and beauty.

McGovern Named Assistant Superintendent

The Virginia Beach School Board at a recent meeting approved the appointment of George E. McGovern as assistant superintendent for Instructional Services. McGovern succeeds E. Carlton Bowyer, who was appointed division superintendent last August.

A 26-year veteran of the Virginia Beach school division, McGovern most recently served as director of Middle School Education. McGovern has also served as principal of Lynnhaven Junior High School, staff assistant for Secondary Education, and assistant principal at Virginia Beach Junior High. He taught at Cox High School for 13 years. McGovern holds a bachelor's degree from the University of South Carolina and a master's degree and certificates of advanced study from Old Dominion University.

The School Board also approved four other appointments. Dr.

George H. Schauer was named director of Gifted Programs. Schauer comes to Virginia Beach from the Salt Lake City, Ut., school district, where he served as coordinator of the Extended Learning Program and International Baccalaureate Program.

Other administrative appointments approved by the Board include Joseph D. Badali as acting principal at Brookwood Elementary School, replacing Arthur Mae Lawson who retired; John Romano as acting assistant principal, Princess Anne Junior High School; and Dorianne N. Sharp as assistant principal, Pembroke Meadows Elementary School.

Prior to the appointments, Badali was a staff assistant at Pembroke Meadows Elementary, Romano was a staff assistant for School Plant and Supply Services, and Sharp was a teacher at Plaza Elementary School.

Commonwealth Transportation Board Approved Legal Documents

The Commonwealth Transportation Board recently approved the legal documents necessary to sell $200 million in bonds the week of Nov. 27 to widen and improve U.S. 58 along Virginia's southern border, according to the Virginia Department of Transportation.

The proceeds from the bond sale will be used for corridor studies, design, right of way acquisition and construction of sections of the 500-mile road between Virginia Beach and Cumberland Gap.

Part of the money from the bond sale will be used to finish the improvements under construction between Courtland and Emporia as quickly as possible.

Additional bonds will be sold over the next five to eight years to help pay for upgrading the entire corridor.

The board, meeting in Alexandria, authorized Commonwealth Transportation Commission Ray D. Pethel to proceed with the bond sale at an interest rate of not more than eight percent and a term of not more than 30 years.

The General Assembly approved the U.S. 58 Corridor Development Program earlier this year and authorized the issuance of the bonds. A portion of the money collected from the state's real estate recordation tax will be used to pay off the bonds.

The road's improvements are expected to promote economic growth across southern Virginia.

Owen In Belmont Opera

Diane C. Owen, the daughter of Benjamin L. Owen, was recently selected for a lead role in the one-act comic opera A Musical at Mr. Cauliflower's at Belmont College in Nashville, Tenn.

Owen, a senior majoring in commercial music, played the part of Ernestine Cauliflower in the 19th century opera spoof. It was performed in the historic Belmont Mansion on Belmont's campus.

could be spread on over amenities such as golf courses.

The property closer to the Green Line would be more valuable, he said.

Six options are suggested as receiving areas:

- To allow residential development north of the Green Line to increase from the current "zoned density" to the "planned density" indicated in the 1986 Comprehensive Plan. A TDR would be required for every dwelling unit approved above the zoned density with the density recommended in the Comprehensive plan as the upper limit.

- Allow additional development in the North Landing subarea of the area between the Green Line and the Blue Line under the pattern of development now prevailing in the city - three to four units per acre.

- Allow additional development in the North Landing subarea of the area between the Green Line and the Blue Line but under a "communities of place" pattern of development. These neighborhoods would be patterned on traditional neighborhoods built earlier in this country's history. Examples are the Fan neighborhood in Richmond, the Ghent neighborhood in Norfolk, Olde Towne in Portsmouth, and Williamsburg. Also Charleston, S.C., and Savannah, Ga.

- Allow additional development under a "communities of place" pattern in that portion of the Courthouse-Sandbridge area north of the Green Line. These communities would be smaller and buffers could be required to establish new "villages" from subdivisions.

- Allow increased development in a few small areas concentrated around existing villages or cross-roads communities in the rural areas of the city - around Pungo, Creeds and Munden Point. A TDR would have to be purchased for each dwelling unit above the current zoned density in these areas.

- Allow TDRs to be used to increase the intensity of non-residential development above the levels now allowed under the zoning ordinance.

The city's current growth management program, principally the maintenance of an urban services boundary, have constrained the supply of developable land with an increase in raw land sales. The allocation of TDRs states the report transferred to what land is available for development can mitigate the supply pressure on development costs.

Siemon said that the upcoming Comprehensive Plan will present three scenarios on the costs of capital facilities under the TDR plan.

He said that a TDR program will help the city achieve better use of available dollars and a substantial advantage in building more compact forms of development in place of suburban sprawl.

The report also recommends that the density increase for housing be from 1.5 units per acre to 3.5 units per acre because that density appears to be the preferred use in the city.

Siemon said that he recommends that the transfer rights be freely marketable over the entire protected area.

Councilman Albert Balko said that while the city is debating TDRs to protect the environment, its sister city (Chesapeake) is approving 5,000 housing units nextdoor.

Siemon said that the future land use plan takes that into consideration.

Councilman John D. Moss stressed uses for economic development.

Siemon said that most of the TDR programs operating successfully are in perpetuity. He listed as successful programs those in Dade County, Fla., and in the Pinelands, between Camden and Atlantic City, N.J.

By the time the TDR program works its way through the Legislature, Siemon said, the comprehensive plan will be ready.

Councilman Reba McClanahan said that the economic analysis should include more attention to recreation and open space. She wanted to know that the cost of open space and recreation would be in conjunction with the TDR program.

McClanahan also remarked that the property owners adjoining the receiver areas may want the right to develop in the same way. How will they be treated?

Siemon said that since there will be a rational reason for discriminatory treatment, the courts will uphold the city, so long as the comprehensive plan and public policies are carefully articulated.

Local Government Leadership In Virginia Beach

The Mayor's Report

Virginia Beach Mayor
The Honorable
Meyera Oberdorf

As the mayor of the largest city in the Commonwealth and its first directly elected mayor, I would like to tell you about Virginia Beach — its strengths, its weaknesses, and its needs; and perhaps some other observations about the job of mayor.

Speaking of Virginia Beach's strengths is something I love to do and is quite easy. With a population of approximately 390,000 compared to 262,000 in the 1980 census, it is obvious that the City of Virginia Beach is a vibrant growing locality. We have also changed quite a bit in the last ten years in ways besides mere growth. We not have more people living and working in Virginia Beach than living and working elsewhere in the region. To me this is a very important step in the city's maturity because it shows we are now generating a greater number of jobs for our citizens than the rest of the region.

Virginia Beach also has the largest city public school system in the Commonwealth with approximately 64,000 students. This creates a budget of $271 million for schools, which is about 43 percent of our total operating budget of $587 million. We also spend approximately $3,700 a year per student, of which the majority is local money.

Because of our rapid growth, we have also been forced to catch up with some of the infrastructure demands that were created that are now being paid for by all the residents of the city. For instance, several years ago the City Council identified an $800 million backlog in road projects. With the voters approval, we are now pursuing a very aggressive road building project where we have approximately $300 million in road projects under design and/or construction at this time.

We are also in the process now of adopting a new Capital Improvements Program for the next ten years. This will be a ten-year program that will cost approximately $1.5 billion besides addressing all the backlog in infrastructure needs, it will also fully fund the Lake Gaston Project which we hope to have on-line by 1994 and will bring all urban services to the Green Line which is the urban services boundary in the center of the city.

We are also examining our economic development efforts at this time.

Our Children In The Balance

The VBEA Report

By Clair Polley,
President of the Virginia
Beach Education Association

This week's article was written by Cheryl Tokac, Virginia Beach Education Association vice-president.

Children today are growing up faster both physically and emotionally than we did just one generation ago. They are being faced with situations that were unheard of in the small town in which I grew up. There are too many choices available to our children and they must use their developing skills of decision making and long range planning to make decisions which often can alter the course of their lives forever. Once decision that they must make concerns the attraction which involvement with drugs presents.

We have heard a lot about drugs in the last few years. Every political campaign identified combating the nation's drug problem as a major objective of their political platform. The nation's schools, along with the national administration, launched a comprehensive program centered around the phrase "just say no." It was a simple phrase which carried much impact. For adolescents it was a clear message: Say no to drugs and redirect your interests elsewhere. Parents were encouraged to become more actively involved with their children and provide them with a variety of enriching activities. For young children, the message was simple for them to understand. The message was concrete and clear — stay away from drugs.

Drugs are an insidious problem and just saying "no" can, at times, be insufficient in combating the problem. We live in a society where lives are often complex and where we often take our families and close friends for granted and rarely take time to acknowledge that things may be troubling them in their lives. Subtle changes in others often go unnoticed and many times, it is not until something awful happens that we suddenly take notice. It is difficult to determine exactly why children begin to use drugs. It does provide a temporary escape from a particular problem, but, as adults, we know that the problem is not solved and just as mentioned earlier, drugs provide only a temporary escape. Stress and pain seem to accompany us throughout life. By providing our children with the support needed to effectively deal with those events which cause pain, we are giving them the op-

Criminal Justice - A System In Crisis

By Lillian Youell,
Virginia Beach Constitution
Celebration Commission
Consultant

Earlier this month, I attended the National Law-Related Education (LRE) Leadership Seminar in St. Louis, Mo. The LRE Act of 1978 defines law-related education as "education to equip non-lawyers with knowledge and skills pertaining to the law, the legal process, the legal system and the fundamental principles and values on which these are based."

Since that year, the National LRE Leadership Seminar has served as the principal means for leadership development in the field of LRE. The annual seminar has provided a forum in which LRE leaders from around the nation can learn from and share experiences with experts and colleagues.

This past May, the Youth Education for Citizenship Committee of the American Bar Association held a Retreat in Chicago to identify important issues which will be relevant in the 1990s and possibly into the next century. The consensus of the invited group leaders was that LRE faces challenges unsurpassed in its history.

Whereas, last year's seminar was on the single subject of drugs, the basic agenda this year was on three themes — "The State of the American Criminal Justice System," "Ethics and Law in America," and "Educational Reform Movements." Instead of being isolated problems, the three subjects overlapped in interesting twists.

There is a very real threat to our Bill of Rights because of a lack of understanding.

Having served as a docent (teaching guide) in the Virginia Beach Court Docent Program for many years, I was looking forward to the opening plenary session and I was not disappointed. The speaker was Sam Dash, former chief counsel to the U.S. Senate Watergate Committee and currently a law professor at Georgetown University Law Center. As chair of the ABA's Committee on Criminal Justice, he reported the findings of that committee's report on the Crisis in Criminal Justice, and a copy of the published report was given to each attendee.

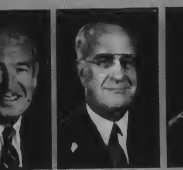

From my notes, I offer this "report" on his startling and stimulating address. Dash asserted that our crisis is ignorance. The public doesn't understand what law is all about. Our rights under the Constitution are thus in jeopardy. We need to look to schools for legal literacy. If we the People are that development would be needed to make the project feasible.

Helen McDonald said that if the city waited any longer the cost would go even higher. She said she opposed a self-contained treatment plant to discourage growth along Sandbridge Road, saying it would be illegal, and to isolate Sandbridge while making the citizens pay the full cost of the city's capital projects is unfair.

Judy Gearhart also wants sewers in Sandbridge. She said that the other alternative is condemnation. She said that most of the property from Lago Mar is wetlands would not be capable of development.

Margie Klein said that Sandbridge needs sand on the beach more than sewers.

William Brown, M.D., said that there is no documented health problem arising from septic tanks, while public sewers lead to big development. One account of sickness from swimming in a canal is not sufficient to sewer the community. He added that there is no evidence that the contamination came from a human source.

Cheryl Pettigrew said that more people are injured in traffic accidents on Sandbridge Road than become sick from polluted waters. She pointed out that the mother of the child who became ill works for a real estate company, inferring an interest in development.

Sharon Prescott pointed out that the city has polluted canals where sewers exist.

Donald M. Oglesby said that the only thing that keeps Sandbridge from developing like Shore Drive is the lack of sewers.

Maxine Graham, a Sandbridge resident, said that the civic league has never addressed city sewers, nor vote was taken on city sewers, but that most of the officers of the civic league opposed sewers. She added that over 51 percent of the sewer petitions were signed by civic league members, and although members did not vote to join the Council of Civic Organizations, the officers took it upon themselves to join.

Flyover

Council also excluded the flyover ramp from southbound Military Highway to eastbound Indian River Road in the Military Highway widening project.

Councilman John D. Moss told citizens protesting the flyover that the Virginia Department of Highways (VDOT) has yet to make a recommendation. But, he recommended that the flyover be deleted from the budget. City Manager Aubrey V. Watts Jr., he said, has sent a letter to VDOT saying that the flyover is not the proper solution. VDOT will come back with a recommendation, he said, but "we're stopping the funding."

Garland Isdell said that he was not opposed to the widening of Military Highway, but opposed the flyover.

R.W. Van Kirk wanted to know what the city's plans were concerning reports that the city was negotiating with a private developer to add the 18 holes at Redwing Golf Course. He objected to turning the property over to a private developer because the property was "built and paid for by the citizens."

He said that the fees would be increased. He presented petitions with 1,600 signatures of citizens in opposition.

The budget includes $55,000 for the additional course.

Mayor Meyera Oberdorf said that the 288 acres, which makes up Red Wing Park, is now leased from the State along with other property which the city has improved. The State has required that the city purchase the Redwing Park land as well as the other properties for $4.7 million over the next several years.

The city also is negotiating for an additional 130-acre tract for the city manager is examining the possibility that a private developer may come in to develop the course with the city or alone, but the city manager has not made a presentation to date.

The $55,000 remains in the adopted budget.

Council also agreed to accelerate the construction of the London Bridge Elementary School, to include a berm in the Centerville Turnpike road project which will be between the roadway and the Lake James Park, to make an aggressive update of the bikeway program, to follow up on the Green Run open space program and to have a staff report before taking action, and to provide additional park and launching facilities at the West Neck Bridge project.

Dan Divinney, president of the Lake James Home Owners Association, also asked that if the city continued with the relocation of Centerville Turnpike the residents want a certified appraiser to be hired so that the people will be compensated fairly for the loss of property. He asked that the city delete the relocation of the road.

Council Names Committee Members

City Council decided to hold the membership of the Central Business District to 11 and to have city staff members as ex-officio members only.

Council named committee members as follows:

From the Central Business District — Gerald Divaris, CBD chairman; Richard Oliveri, a developer; William J. Cashman, planner, and Michael Ash, architect.

Chamber of Commerce — William A. Schlimgen, QED (president) — Robert Jones, Civic Clubs — Ted Hansen, Pocahontas Village; and Dick Jackens, Pembroke Manor.

Planning Commission — Charles Krummell.

At-Large — Jim Willenbrink, Development Authority — Alfred Randolph.

Serving ex-officio will be Thomas Martinson, deputy city manager; E. Dean Block, assistant city manager, and Dr. Fred Hansen, School Board.

Serving as Council liaison will be "Councilman John D. Moss and William D. Sessions Jr.

Francis Land House Seeks Furnishings

The Board of Governors of the Francis Land House is working with the Period Residential Design studio class of the Interior Design program at Tidewater Community College-Chesapeake Campus to interpret the social and economic period to seek funding to furnish the home.

Ruth Ackright, administrator, and Glenda Knowles of the board, will coordinate with Nancy Templeman, interior design instructor at TCC-Chesapeake, to create renderings of the period, by room. The renderings will be used in the home to illustrate what it would look like during the period and to communicate in a presentation the board's need for funding to the Virginia Beach City Council.

The project has involved research including trips to Upper Wolfscare Plantation and a special study tour to Colonial Williamsburg.

Students are assigned rooms and will prepare renderings that involve the arrangement and selection of furnishings and accessories.

Students' renderings will be presented at the house on Tuesday, Dec. 5 at 7 p.m. and on Thursday, Dec. 7 at 8:30 a.m. to a representative group of the board. The instructor, Nancy Templeman, will make a full presentation of all renderings to the entire Board of Governors on Dec. 7 at 4 p.m.

All student work for this class will be on display in the lobby of the TCC-Chesapeake Campus from Dec. 8 to Dec. 13, 1989.

For more information call 486-0248 between 3 and 5 p.m.; or, 547-9271, ext. 219.

Park Inn Holds Benefit Garage Sale

Park Inn International has announced that it will hold a benefit garage sale on Friday, Dec. 1 from noon to 7 p.m., and on Saturday, Dec. 2 from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Park Inn employees are expected to gather clothing, furniture and other items for sale. Proceeds will benefit the Joy Fund. Baked goods and beverages will also be offered. Any items remaining after the sale will be donated to the Salvation Army.

Call 425-2200 for more information. The Park Inn is located at 424 Atlantic Avenue.

Garden Clubs Host Jones

The Council of Garden Clubs of Virginia Beach will host Wayne Jones on Wednesday, Nov. 29 at 10 a.m. in the Central Library Auditorium.

Jones will demonstrate "Floral Christmas Arrangements." He will do start-to-finish demonstrations of different techniques and the latest styles in the floral industry.

Some words to describe the new art include: circular, vertical, basing, grouping, clustering, zoning, bonding, pillowing and waterfall.

Admission is $2 and tickets are available at the door.

Stanley Gross, who owns the building and property, as well as an adjacent styling salon and another restaurant and bar, could not be reached for comment. His wife, however, who would not give her first name, said "We are going to fix it up and rebuild it." She said it may take several months to complete the work.

Kellam said he wouldn't speculate as to the fire's cause, but said it's under investigation. One firefighter was treated at the scene to remove some debris from his eye, Kellam said.

Kellam said Virginia Beach has had about 6,000 fires thus far in 1989, including building fires, car fires, brush fires and illegal leaf burnings. He said that figure's about average.

Nicklin said nothing could be salvaged from the fire, and that some of the property was insured.

Our current split in the real estate tax revenues between commercial/industrial and residential is 20 percent commercial/industrial and 80 percent residential. We are working very hard to get toward a 70-30 split or even better than that. This would reduce the tax burden that residential property owners bear while at the same time expanding our tax base, providing more jobs and, hopefully, jobs with increased salaries.

Council is also engaged in a very ambitious resort area revitalization to maintain Virginia Beach as one of the top tourist destinations on the east coast. This ten-year $56 million "pay-as-you-go" project will completely redo the streetscape in the resort area at the Oceanfront. This phased program will have us undergrounding the utilities one year and doing the streetscape the next year, it will into its third year. The first phase of the streetscape or final phase of the improvement for several blocks will be ready for inspection next spring, and I think you will be very surprised with what we are doing with our tourist attraction.

Virginia Beach is not all bricks and mortar. We have engaged in an aggressive program of making the city a more attractive place aesthetically and culturally. The percent for the arts program approved by City Council provides that one percent of the operating budget is set aside for the purchase of public art. Examples of this are the Light Garden at the Pavilion and the sculpture outside our new Central Library which is a work of art in itself. We also have created a parking lot landscape ordinance to help make shopping centers and other developed areas more attractive through landscaping. We have embarked in a very aggressive program of planning in the median and right-of-way of city road projects, adopted an ordinance restricting the number, size and height of signs in order to reduce the blight along many of our roadways and, recently adopted an ordinance requiring the replacement of trees lost in the development process.

My job as mayor, as I see it, is one of facilitator. I am but one among ten other equals although I am elected at-large for the position. However, by the chapter of the city, by duties are purely ceremonial although I am in the position to try to help reach consensus.

I think as the present and future leaders of Hampton Roads, it is incumbent upon all of us to become involved in local government. Local government is where the action is now and where it is going to be for the foreseeable future. With the federal government all but abdication its role in what happens at the local level by its cessation of funding of all but entitlement programs and the state facing increasingly lean financial times, it is up to local governments now to look after their own. This is very appropriate and I think is a good sign. Local governments are closer to the people and more responsive to the people. Local governments are also usually leaner and meaner, and in Virginia Beach this is especially so with our extremely low number of city employees per capita.

Each of us needs to get involved with our community, whether it be on the library board, being appointed to another board or commission in our city, or being a candidate for an elected office. You are the future of Virginia Beach. You are our lifeline. I am very enthusiastic about the future, but this enthusiasm will only be rewarded if you decide to become involved.

truly sovereign, it is sad and will be disastrous if these sovereigns remain illiterate about their responsibilities to law and citizenship.

There is a very real threat to our Bill of Rights because of lack of understanding. The public is outraged about drugs and crime, but anger and ignorance stand in the way of improvement. Education in the law must start at lowest level. The public actually thinks that the crisis is due to our Constitutional rights and restrictions.

To give his committee credibility, Dash chose many non-lawyers, police chiefs, and other law enforcement people to serve. They held hearings to determine if the public's perception was correct. Is the Bill of Rights an impediment? They did find a serious loss of respect for law.

The committee examined the "exclusionary" rule. Do the Fourth Amendment restrictions on the authority of police to search and seize evidence play a significant role in crime control? The committee concluded that the exclusionary rule does not significantly handicap police and prosecutors in their efforts to arrest, prosecute, and obtain convictions of criminal defendants for most serious crimes. Dash commented that if the concept that "our home is our castle" is eroded, we are in serious trouble.

Under the Fifth Amendment, one has the right to remain silent, and there must be no inference drawn from this silence. The Miranda Rule requires that an accused be advised of this right. Dash said some did not understand the word "counselor," and most declined the opportunity to have a lawyer. Surprisingly, statistics showed that the accused talked more and cooperated better after the Miranda warning. The committee agreed that good law-enforcement can get along within the law.

Dash admitted that the criminal system isn't working, but insisted that the public has not focused on the real problems. The Justice Department reports that there are some 34 million criminals. Thirty-one million never get to court! Only 3,000,000 get into the system and only a small percentage of those are convicted. This is just the tip of the iceberg. Crime is pervasive. America is becoming a criminal society. Dash cited the scandals at HUD and other evidences of corruption, asking, is our country based on morality and integrity?

He revealed that 85 percent of burglaries are unsolved. Thus, a high success rate for burglars. Police cannot do the job we've imposed on them. Those convicted of drug pushing are crowding our jails and overwhelming the system. The public demands results. Cops do a good job and it looks like the crime rate is up.

The major problem for the criminal justice system, identified by all criminal justice respondents to the committee, is lack of sufficient resources. The entire system is starved: police, prosecution, criminal defense, courts and corrections. As currently funded, the criminal justice system cannot provide the quality of justice the public legitimately expects and the people working within the system wish to deliver.

The public is mad but not mad enough to put up the needed money. As the report states, "Inadequate funding leads to less police protection of citizens; unreasonable caseloads for prosecutors and defense lawyers; possible compromise of prosecutions through plea bargaining; inadequate representation for accused persons; crowded court dockets, long delays for criminal trials; and crowded jails and prisons, sometimes resulting in court orders either closing prisons or providing early release for convicted criminals."

portunity to become adults who are stronger in their resolve and in their beliefs. It cannot be emphasized enough that communication is the key to success. Richard D. Towers in his book Student Drug and Alcohol Abuse, identifies several family influences which are common to children who become drug-abusing adolescents. They are negative communication patterns, inconsistent and unclear behavior limits, denial of the child's drug usage, unrealistic parental expectations, family self-medication and miscarried expressions of anger.

Today we debate the growing concern that schools are expected to solve all of society's problems. Everything from nutritional programs to after school programs and programs for drug abuse are being put upon the schools to handle. Teachers were hired to teach in their individual disciplines and often, we all feel that that is only what they should be expected to do. In fact, the problems which drug abuse causes are related to teaching. Failure rates, truancy, class cutting, and discipline problems all affect what goes on every day in the classrooms across our nation. Often these problems are related to a child's involvement with drugs. We need to form a united community; a coalition to combating the threat to our children.

Virginia Beach parents and teachers must be in the forefront of combating drug abuse. Parents can support school-based programs through their presence and by a watchful and vigilant eye on their children. We need to be aware of what the physical signs are and what changes in behavior should trigger a warning for action. Sudden changes in the child's performance in school as well as change in friends or in appearance can be warning signs to teachers that a problem may exist.

The Virginia Beach community needs to be constantly aware of what is going on with our children and provide them with the guidance and understanding that they will need in order to become productive citizens. The future of our nation depends on the course which we choose to take today. So just saying "no" may not be sufficient. We must realize that we are in a battle. We must push on as our children are in the balance.
